THE HOME OF SOLID VALUES. LASSETTERS' FOR COSTUMES.

COATS AND SKIRTS. To all appearance the Coat and Skirt has come to stay. It is so essentially a thing of utility, is sufficiently smart for a dressy occasion, and does not spoil in the first rain storm that comes along. Then, again, it is quite sufficiently warm for all but the coldest weather. It is much in evidence in Serges, Tweeds, and Whipcords.

Tailor Coat and Skirt, Coating Serge, semi-fitting, lined silk. Price, 70/.

Tailor Coat and Skirt, in the new Whipcord. Prices from 35/.

Tailor Coat and Skirt, in Mixed Tweeds, trimmed buttons and loops. Price, 37/6.

Navy Coating Model Costumes, by best makers, from 3 to 10 guineas.

ROBES. The Robe, ready to wear, and convenient, has become an essential adjunct to one's wardrobe; it is in all materials, heavy and light, suitable for cold westerlies or summer zephyrs. It is severely plain or elaborately trimmed. It is in all colours, from the most vivid to the most sombre. This present season Navy Blue seems to predominate, and also Black and White in all combinations is very strong.

One-piece Robe, in Grey Whipcord, trimmed Silk, Leather Belt. Price, 37/6.

One-piece Robe, in Navy Coating Serge, trimmed Chiffon Taffeta. Price, 42/.

Smart One-piece Robe, in Grey Tweed, Buttons all down front. Price, 21/9.

Model One-piece Robe, in Navy fine Cashmere, piped red. Price, 4 guineas.

Handsome Robe in Grey and Black Mixture, Cord and Velveteen. Price, 65/.

EVENING FROCKS. Of these we hold a nice selection from the best home and Paris manufacturers, in fact they are mostly model costumes, which we are able to sell out here at less than the same things would be procurable at home. As these garments are modelled by people who have all the products of the world of fashion at their doors, they are able to carry out their ideas quite untrammelled by lack of those essential details of trimmings and coloration which make for perfection. Prices range from Five Guineas to Twenty Guineas.

MAIDS' COATS AND SKIRTS AND ROBES. It is undoubtedly most convenient to be able to buy from stock, ready-to-wear garments for young Ladies. So few dressmakers are able to cater successfully for young Ladies. The manufacturers who make this class of goods are specialists, as a rule they make for Girls and young Ladies, and for them alone, so that they know not only the right proportions, but what is suitable in material and style—smartness without ostentation.

Smart Empire Coat and Skirt in Serge. Sizes, 50 52 54 56 over all. 45/ 47/6 50/ 52/6

Tailor-made Coating Serge, semi-fitting. Sizes, 50 52 54 56 over all. 42/ 43/ 44/ 45/

One-piece Robe, Coating Serge, Piped Saxe. All sizes. Price, 32/6.

One-piece Magyar, with White Vest. All sizes. Price, 32/6.

FREE CARRIAGE. LASSETTERS pay free Carriage on all Drapery, Clothing, and Showroom Goods, and Boots and Shoes, to any part of the Commonwealth, and to any port in New Zealand and Pacific Isles.

LASSETTERS, CHEAPSIDE, SYDNEY.

THESE are DAYS of INQUIRY. There are WAGES BOARDS and PARLIAMENTARY BOARDS, ROYAL COMMISSIONS and OVERSEA COMMISSIONS inquiring into ALL SORTS of QUESTIONS that affect the COMMON WEAL; indeed, almost everyone considers EVERYBODY is entitled to know EVERYTHING. As UNIVERSAL PROVIDERS we invite INQUIRY, and go further, suggesting INSPECTION and COMPARISON, a PRACTICE which, in COMMERCIAL CIRCLES, is regarded as the TRUE TEST of value. TO-DAY'S PRICE LIST of PRODUCTS of the EAST demonstrates in the most PRACTICAL WAY the MARVELLOUS ECONOMIES that are effected by ANTHONY HORDERNS' FAMOUS LOW PRICES.

ON OUR SELECTION.
Out in the marts of the great world we hear that tears and laughter are ever ready to gush forth together. Out at the BACK OF BEYOND we who have seen know. On Saturday night 1000 people saw this play, and wherever "On Our Selection" is played thousands and tens of thousands more will see it and know.

ON OUR SELECTION.
Just as the pioneer carves for his wife and family a home out of the great big, black, dismal scrub, just so is "On Our Selection" one great big hunk chopped from the pages of that pioneer's life.

ON OUR SELECTION.
There on the stage is Shingle Hut, just as it stood in the olden days, and they are not so old when one comes to think of it. There is the same old pannikin on the same old nail, and the same old kerosene tin from which all and sundry used to drink.

ON OUR SELECTION.
Yields 1000 Bushels of Laughter

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.

NO MORE PIANO TROUBLES,
THAT IS, WHEN YOU BUY A VICTOR.
Ordinary Piano troubles and defects are inside the case—they are not judged by outward appearances. A few months' wear loosens the strings of cheaply-constructed instruments—causes defects in the actions. Hot weather causes shrinkages in the timber, and the interior soon becomes displaced. Cold, damp weather swells the timbers and other materials used, and causes the wood to swell and the metal parts to rust. If you buy a VICTOR PIANO from PALING'S you buy an instrument that carries Paling's full guarantee—an instrument that will wear well for many, many years, and give every member of your family positive and permanent satisfaction—an instrument that offers wonderful value for your money. VICTOR PIANOS in four beautiful models, sold for cash, or on easy time payments. Catalogues and price lists are post free.

FARM AND STATION.

CARE OF LAMBING EWES.

The splitting up of the larger pastoral runs, and the increase of wool-producing holdings of not more than moderate size render possible and profitable a more detailed care of flocks than can be exercised when a merely skeleton industry is applied in a primitive fashion to immense areas. Under skilful management this is reflected in the natural increase of stock; and lambing percentages should continue increasing along with subdivisional development. On the larger sheep runs the most that can be done towards securing high lambing returns is the establishment of a safe water supply, and the provision of such pasturage as the fluctuations of the seasons will permit to accrue from a policy of reasonably light stocking. In dealing with smaller flocks, a considerable degree of protection against enemies becomes possible; and mortality is averted by aiding the ewes through such lambing risks as those arising from the fly trouble, from being cast, and from a false presentation of the lamb. During unfavourable seasons the expense entailed in having lambing paddocks continually ridden by careful men is returned many times over, for it is then when a large proportion of the ewes, being unable to rise after lambing, become an easy prey to eagles, whilst starvation tends to take away from the volume of the maternal instinct, so that emaciated mothers will often walk away from and desert the newly-dropped offspring. A good shepherd is able to prevent much of this lamb desertion by heading the mother back to the lamb when the latter is able to run after her. Unfortunately, the methods of sheep husbandry have not developed along lines parallel to the changed conditions.

In much timbered country one of the most fatal enemies of lambing ewes is the ordinary wedge-tailed eagle, or eagle-hawk, as it is most often termed. During certain years these birds of prey are more plentiful and savage than at others. A notable instance of this occurred in Western Victoria during the intense drought of 1898, when a plague of them swarmed from the north over the merino country, killing thousands of ewes and many more lambs. Every ewe cast after lambing, through weakness or through an unevenness in the ground, falls an immediate prey to the first eagle finding her. The bird will quickly open her flank, and strew the intestines over the grass. A lamb temporarily away from its mother will be picked bodily from the ground by an assailant, which, during a year of great scarcity of feed, will perch on a tree near the flock, watching for hours together for the effects of starvation to give the expected opportunity. During the season just mentioned it was no uncommon experience for a boundary rider to shoot as many as half a dozen of these birds during a day. Poisoning is often tried as a method of protecting sheep from eagles, but it proves less effective than shooting. There is a common belief among sheepmen that strychnine acts as an emetic on eagles. Certainly carcases liberally charged with this poison are frequently devoured by them without apparent result. Among any sort of timber, green or otherwise, it is not difficult to approach within effective range of an eagle by riding round the bird in a circle, which is gradually reduced in diameter. The bird will often take fright as the man alights, and for that reason a horse accustomed to stand quietly under fire is useful. Considerable difficulty is experienced in training hacks so that, after the first shots have been fired from their backs, they will not spin round as soon as the gun is raised to the shoulder. A large-sized shot should be used, and, if possible, the eagle should be fired at from the rear. Eagles are difficult to approach on plains country, but not on the plains.

By reason of an old prejudice, certain breeders discountenance any continued riding of lambing paddocks or interference with lambing ewes, and, unless reliable and experienced men be chosen for the work, the objection is valid. But a capable sheepman can daily spend hours round the flocks without frightening the ewes away from their offspring. He may be accompanied without injury to the sheep by a quiet, well-trained greyhound for use against any stray fox which may be sighted in the day-time. In his equipment there should be a shot-gun, a bottle of strychnine to poison the carcase of any dead sheep as a bait for the fox, and a skinning knife. During dry years a bottle of kerosene, or other maggot destroyer, and a pair of shears should also be strapped to his saddle. Lambing ewes soon grow accustomed to a man riding quietly among them.

ITEMS.

The prime movers in the co-operative bacon factories recently started in Victoria claim that the movement has been exceedingly successful. In 1910 the open market prices for prime baconers were 27s to 42s, last month they were 63s to 75s. It is contended that this increase cannot be due to shortage of supplies, as there are plenty of pigs available.

For some considerable time past a good deal of interest has been aroused regarding the merits of ordinary paspalum and Rhodes grass on the North Coast. One result of this has been that more attention has been directed generally to grasses. In the Coff's Harbour district Mr. Jordan, a local fisherman, discovered what he thought to be a new grass, but upon it being identified it was found to be paspalum compressum, commonly known as the carpet grass, of the United States.

This grass has been growing in several parts of the North Coast for many years past. It appears to be relished by stock, judging by the way they keep the plants closely grazed, and it is claimed that it is killing out the ordinary paspalum. It is only natural stock would relish any other grass as a change where they have been accustomed to one grass only. From the patches of paspalum compressum that have been under observation for many years there is yet no evidence of the life of paspalum dilatatum being endangered.

An interesting experiment is in progress in New Zealand at the Moumahaki State Farm to test the plant food value of different crops ploughed in as green manure. An area of 15 acres has been apportioned into four equal parts, and in these mustard, rape, buckwheat, and vetches were planted. After ploughing in the crop the whole area was sown with rye. This was after being grazed upon by lambs. The field was then planted with turnips. Careful note is now being taken of this crop upon the different areas.

The Victorian commissioner who is investigating the question says that there is every prospect of a very large meat trade being developed with San Francisco and Australia. It is advised that the greatest care should be exercised to see that nothing but goods of first quality are sent over. Very rigid regulations exist with regard to the importation of meat into that country. Every consignment must be accompanied by a certificate from an authorised official.

A New industry is being established in New Zealand. It is the export to Vancouver of vealers, a great demand for which exists in many parts of Canada. The calves are carefully dressed in their skins, and when they reach their destination they are skinned and prepared for market. It is said that the flavour and quality of the veal is not impaired in any way by allowing the hides to remain on the carcase till it is removed preparatory to offering the flesh for sale. The hide is, of course, a marketable commodity.

A few weeks ago the blackberry bushes in the Guy Fawkes district were denuded of their leaves by a species of caterpillar that appeared in thousands. The canes were stripped bare of their leaf growth, but the clusters of fruit in various stages of ripeness were left untouched. It was considered locally that this caterpillar might be the means of assisting in the eradication of this noxious plant, which grows so luxuriantly in this district. So far there is no evidence of their doing any work in that direction, and this might be accounted for when it is remembered that their ravages only last for a few weeks.

The "Leader" on Mr. Nielsen.—"The old 'dry farming' report from America is revived by a returned visitor. This time Mr. N. Nielsen, in a voluminous communication to the New South Wales Government, states that wheat can be grown in 'dry' districts, with a rainfall of 20 inches. Mr. Nielsen appears to be ignorant of the fact that Victoria has taught the world the secrets of 'dry farming,' and has already grown good crops of wheat or 6 inches of rain. Mr. Nielsen's 'discovery' in America is a mare's nest."

WATER HYACINTH.

THE TYRANT OF THE NORTH.

The river steamer swings round the high point and then swerves suddenly across the channel towards the opposite bank, while strange guttural sounds float sternwards from the wheel. A jaded southerner, who up to now has been feasting tired eyes on the wild sub-tropical forest of a river isle, glances ahead and a shade of excitement lights his face. His admiration for that other brilliant island sweeping down on the current is undisguised and unlimited. "Glorious," he cries. "So that's the famous hyacinth."

A blase commercial lowers his paper for a casual glance. "That's the (unprintable) hyacinth all right," he growls, without appreciation. As for the native opposite, he does not turn, but utter contempt is in the stare directed at the tourist. All the same, that tourist was right. The water hyacinth is really a plant of great beauty, but when you have travelled about twenty miles on one of the northern rivers, this beauty begins to pall. When you have lived by that river for a month or so, the beauty vanishes, and the hyacinth might be aptly termed a "beautiful devil."

In the past, when it was still rare, Mrs. Riverite liked to have a plant in the front garden—sometimes a kerosene tin, sometimes an old tub sunk in the ground was utilised for its accommodation. Then some genius, bitten by the "artistic spider," transferred a plant to a waterhole in the creek, which flowed through his property. Soon any stranger might have been pardoned for exclaiming at the hyacinth running between banks, for the sun had ceased to glisten on the waters. So the pest spread—even seeking new waterholes and creeks to conquer, until at last it found the main rivers. Now it has commenced on a great march of conquest—its aim being the expulsion of steamships from fresh water. If something is not done soon the steamship must give place to the aeroplane or train.

Many proposals have been made, such as the hyacinth bill, against the pest; but so far nothing has been done to carry them into effect. On the other hand, the hyacinth has been up and doing, all along, and is still winning. The other day the Clarence rose about two feet here at Grafton. This is a scarcely noticeable rise for this river, yet the Grafton steam ferry was blockaded for some time through the enemy having captured the wharf. The vehicular ferry was put out of action, and had to apply for assistance. Southampton punt had a line carried away, and also went out of action. Doble-street punt was blockaded, and passengers had to use boats. Many small jetties along the banks also suffered.

It must be remembered that all this occurred when the flow was little stronger than the ebb of its own average spring tide. For years there had been no flood in the district to remove the pest from creeks and inlets, and in consequence the amount of the plant in creeks and lagoons is enormous. Winter is coming, and indications point to big rains. Thus it will be readily understood that persons owning wharf property or boatsheds, after seeing the result of a small fresh, dread the result of a flood.

Some years ago, in the days of the last big flood, the main street of Grafton was transformed into a rushing torrent, in some parts from 10 to 12 feet deep. There was little or no hyacinth then; but should a flood like that come this winter the town is in risk of destruction. A rise of from five to six feet will wreck the river front. A creek rises suddenly, and layer after layer of the plant is piled into a solid mass ere it finally reaches the main river, where it floats like a giant several acres in extent. One of these banks carries weight. The weight is not in the plant but in the roots—usually from two to three feet long, fibrous, and coated with slimy mud, which it collects from the water. One floating mass from six to eight feet high and half an acre in extent is enough to make the strongest wharf go under, and in a big flood such "drift" would pass over any ordinary wooden house like a launch over a drifting feather. A "drift" of the dimensions given is nothing out of the way.

The remedy lies in concerted action, but the people most concerned fail to see that. They content themselves with strong "recommendations," which are handed in to the local governing bodies and passed on to the Minister for Works. If the farmers and traders on the affected areas would work together the pest may be subdued—not eradicated, for eradication is impossible. The hyacinth has come to stay, and the only way of escape from its dangers is by a system of unresting warfare.

FIGHTING THE RABBITS.

GOOD WORK AT GUY FAWKES.

A splendid example of the result of the combined use of wire netting and poison carts in destroying rabbits is in evidence in the Guy Fawkes district. A couple of years ago the rabbits increased at such an alarming rate that many stations were almost eaten out and the stock-owners lost heavily during the winter. Under the Stock Protection Board landowners were notified to take action in their destruction. There has consequently been miles upon miles of rabbit-proof fencing erected and poison carts were also employed. In the course of a few months the destruction of rabbits has been marvellous, and where a year or so ago rabbits could be seen in myriads everywhere, now one can travel miles and scarcely see one. One result of the rabbit pest has been that landowners are beginning to clean up their runs of much useless dead timber that affords ample shelter to the vermin.

Rabbits are gradually extending eastwards though it is generally considered they will not get much chance to breed up in the closely settled Dorrigo country where dogs are plentiful and the holdings comparatively small.

INSPECTION OF STALLIONS.

UNIFORM ACTION THROUGHOUT THE STATES.

As an outcome of the recent conference of Ministers of Agriculture, held in Hobart in February last, the chief veterinary officers of four of the Australian States (New South Wales, Victoria, Queensland, and Tasmania) met in conference on the 17th 18th, and 19th inst., to endeavour to arrive at some uniform system throughout the States in connection with the examination and certification of stallions for Government certificates. The other two States, South Australia and Western Australia, were unable to send delegates to the conference, but the former intimated that it would fall in, as far as possible, with the decisions arrived at.

The conference was opened by the Minister of Agriculture, Mr. J. L. Trefle, on Thursday afternoon, and continued its sittings until Saturday morning. The whole question aws thoroughly discussed, and as a result, the following resolutions were carried:—(1) That uniformity of examination and certification of stallions can be attained throughout the States of the Commonwealth on the lines indicated in the minutes of proceedings: (2) That early legislation should be enacted to provide that uncertificated horses should not be allowed to travel or stand for public stud purposes: (3) That in the interests of the scheme for examination and certification of stallions, it is highly desirable that stud books of the recognised breeds of horses should be established in each State forthwith.

Another matter that was discussed at the conference was the question of admission of stock from Queensland into the southern States from clean country upon the usual travelling permit, and in this connection the chief inspectors of stock of Queensland and Tasmania were also present. The matter was fully discussed, and a resolution carried:—That in respect of the admission of cattle from Queensland into the southern States, amendment of the regulations consistent with safety, may be made. The New South Wales chief inspector, Mr. S. T. D. Symons, M.R.C.V.S., intimated that it was intended to send an officer of his department to Queensland as early as possible to go into the whole question locally.

On Friday night the visiting veterinarians and officials were the guests of the Veterinary Association of New South Wales at a dinner at Baumann's Cafe. The visiting members of the conference present were:—Messrs. G. Valder, Tabart, Orr, Cory, M.R.C.V.S., Robertson, B.V.Sc., and Bruce, F.R.C.V.S. Major Kendal, M.R.C.V.S., was also present. The toast of the guests, proposed by the president, Mr. S. T. D. Symons, was replied to by Mr. Tabart and Mr. Robertson. Mr. Valder proposed the toast of the veterinary profession, and Professor Stewart replied. Others present includd:—Capt. Melhuish, Capt. Metson, Messrs. Bell, Baker, Doyle, Oliver, and Henry.

PASTURES BOARDS.

BATHURST.—The rabbit inspector, Mr. E. G. Lynch, reports that during the past month he visited holdings in the vicinity of Sandy Creek, Glanmire, Rockley Road, Lagoon, Lockslev, Sidmouth Valley, Snakes' Valley, Hazelgrove, the Meadows, Duckmaloi, and Irish Corner. The late rains have been of tremendous value to the occupiers of land in all parts of the district. The absence of frosts after the rain has given an impetus to the growth of vegetation. Crops sown after the first fall have made rapid headway. Even such places as Oberon and Duckmaloi, well-known to be cold, have been, during the month, free from frosts, and the holdings are becoming covered with grass—unusual at this time of the year. Rabbits are now much less numerous than in December owing to trapping and poisoning, but with the temporary decrease in the pest the landholders have ceased to make any further effort. The only people doing effective work at present are the market trappers. The neglect shown each winter and spring is, says the inspector, responsible for the large outcrop of young rabbits each summer, and the consequent damage done to crops.

WENTWORTH IRRIGATION AREA.

WENTWORTH.—Heavy dews are retarding the fruit drying process, but a sequence of fine sunny days has been the recent experience. Fruit is coming in in large quantities to the packing sheds. Over 1000 tons have been received by the F.U. at Renmark. Despite the drawbacks that followed on the changing weather the fruit lost has been comparatively small. The drying season has been drawn out, but the gain in weight should fully compensate for any loss in quality following on the rain. A lot of the good crop has to be harvested yet, but the main picking is drawing to a close. On Mr. S. P. Taylor's block at Curluua (Wentworth irrigation area), apricots 3½ years old averaged a ton of dried fruit to the acre. The oranges on the settlement are looking very healthy, and four-year-old Washington navels are credited with a prospective yield this season of from two to four cases to the tree. Mandarins, two and a half years old are also carrying heavily. Four-year-old peach trees have returned 15 tons of fresh fruit to the acre. Salweys dried out at 3 tons and Albertas at 2¼ tons on one holding. Five acres of three-year-old trees averaged nearly 3 cwt of fruit to the tree. Another blocker has harvested half a ton of dried peaches to the acre off two-year-old trees, realising £50 from 1½ acre of trees this age. An additional example of the fertility of the soil is the case of an orchardist on Curlua who got a good picking from a plantation of Comet peaches the first year; the third year they returned 32cwt dried to the acre, and this year 2 tons.

PRICE OF MILK.

DISSATISFIED SUPPLIERS.

UNANDERRA.—A well-attended meeting of milk suppliers was held at the Municipal Hall on Friday evening, when the recent reduction in the price of milk from 11d to 9d per gallon by the Sydney milk companies was discussed.

It was decided to leave the matter in the hands of the general executive of the Milk Suppliers' Association to decide what action should be taken in the matter.

The suppliers contend that the reduction was not warranted by the increase of milk since the recent rainfall, and that the price should have remained at 11d per gallon right through the winter months, in order to give them an opportunity to recoup themselves for loss sustained through the drought. They also forecast a greater scarcity of milk through the winter than there was during the dry weather on account of the shortage of winter feed for cattle.

DAIRYING.

ALSTONVILLE.—For the four weeks ending March 27 the Alstonville Co-operative Refrigerating Company manufacturer 83 tons butter, of which amount about 3 per cent. was second-class. For this pay suppliers received 9¾d for first-class butter, and 8¾d for second-class. The butter has been sold very advantageously in Western Australia, Victoria, and Tasmania at prices above the ordinary market prices.

CASINO.—The Kyogle Co-operative Dairy Company, Ltd., distributed £15,000 for the month of March last. The butter pay was 9¼d and 8¼d per lb for first and second class butter. The previous record was £10,000 for a month's pay.

JONES ISLAND.—The Manning River Co-operative Dairy Company's returns for March suppliers were paid 9¾d for first-class and 8¾d for second-class commercial butter. There was 8 per cent. of second-class, which was larger than usual. The output for the month showed an increase of 18 per cent. on the previous month, and a decrease of one ton on the corresponding month of last year. The net turnover was £9509 3s 5d. The present weekly output is 16 tons. Nine hundred and seventy-seven cases were manufactured for the first week in March against the first week in April. A falling-off of 366 cases in a month. This is the greatest drop the company has ever had in the autumn. The rain came too late in this district for much growth before the winter sets in, and the supply for the next few months will be very low. The export is showing a small profit to date, and high prices have been realised for the season.

DISTRICT ITEMS.

KEMPSEY.—Some time ago a special prize was offered by the business people of Kempsey for the best acre of maize to exceed 130 bushels to the acre. The first prize amounted to £15. The season was somewhat late when the prize was offered, and there was only one competitor. This was Mr. A. G. Unicomb, of Seven Oaks, Macleay River. An acre was measured off, and a committee of gentlemen appointed to see the maize pulled, husked, and weighed. The corn was of the Hogan variety. There was nothing special about the size of the cobs, but the material points were quantity and weight. The result was 133 bushels of marketable maize, and 3 bushels of pig corn or faulty corn.

YOUNG.—Up to the present, and from the beginning of the year, there has been no complaint about want of moisture in the soil. But a drying easterly wind has now set in, and, as it follows numerous heavy dews, is very rapidly extracting the moisture. Already some farmers are crying out about the difficulty of getting ploughs down. There has been something phenomenal about this season all through. The heavy rains did not cause anything like the growth they should have done. This was attributed to cold following. A number of warm days caused all vegetation to bound away, lucerne especially. The most peculiar feature was the effect of the sun's rays. On a cool day they would blaze out suddenly and fairly sting. One result was an appearance on apple trees that the oldest growers had never seen before. Varieties such as Stone Pippin coloured up until they glowed almost like a Jonathan. On the foliage the edges of leaves were burned, giving the appearance of black spot.

BREAD SUPPLY.

TROUBLE BETWEEN UNIONS.

HOLIDAY QUESTION.

The holiday question in respect to the bread-baking industry is still causing anxiety. If the operative bakers have their way, there will be no curtailment or cutting off of the bread supply. But it has yet to be settled whether the bread-carters will agree to forego the second holiday per month which has been gazetted. The bakers are not prepared to do the double night's work which would make it possible for carters to deliver a two-days' supply of bread on one day. They suggest an alternative—that the trade should have annual instead of monthly holidays.

The position was considered at a mass meeting of the N.S.W. Operative Bakers' Union at the Trades Hall on Saturday. The president, Mr. G. Allen, stated that the bakers were determined not to do the double night on the first Monday in May. He also said that the chairman of the Master Bakers' Association had stated that the masters could not entertain the idea of granting an annual three weeks' holiday. While the bakers would not think of striking, they were pretty well unanimous not to work any more double nights. They would, however, turn up as usual on the Tuesday and work the regular hours. The breadcarters had refused to call a meeting before May 5, and they could not, meanwhile, offer any valid explanation why the monthly holidays should not be substituted by annual ones.

Mr. John Tracey, assistant secretary of the Operative Bakers' Union, referred to the necessity of bakers seeking rather for a reduction than for the extension of their hours of labour, and said that this attempt to force them into further long shifts was in reality a variation of the bakers' award. He moved,—"That this mass meeting of operative bakers reaffirms its recent decision in refusing to working a double night's shift on Monday, May 5, and that each employer be notified immediately of the same."

It was suggested that the representatives of the bakers and breadcarters should approach the employers with the object of obtaining two weeks' annual holiday on full pay in lieu of the extra holidays which had been granted.

This was rejected by an overwhelming majority, the voting being 220 to 6.

Mr. Mackenzie thereupon moved,—"That the breadcarters and operative bakers approach the employers with the object of deleting the statutory monthly holidays, also the recent holidays gazetted, and to endeavour to obtain three weeks' annual holidays on full pay, with the existing public holidays, and that each award should stand good."

This was agreed to by 180 votes to 7. The number of votes not recorded was accounted for by the fact that some members failed to understand that they could vote for this and also for Mr. Tracey's motion.

Mr. Tracey's motion reaffirming the union's decision not to work a double night on May 5, and that the employers be notified, was eventually carried by 238 votes to 4.

It was further resolved that the delegates to a conference to be held to-day should be empowered to get the best conditions possible.

A further resolution was carried that the secretary make application to the Industrial Court to appeal against the decision of the board in granting the breadcarters the second holiday per month.

The meeting was adjourned until next Saturday afternoon. The breadcarters will hold a general meeting to consider the situation within the next fortnight. As matters now stand the bakers are prepared only to work their present shifts. Possibly the master bakers, in conjunction with the operatives, will be able to bring the breadcarters into line, and thus avoid any public inconvenience.

SUBURBAN NEWS.

ASHFIELD.

The Ashfield Council's tender of £6760 for the repair of permanent roads between Battle Bridge and the north-western corner of Ashfield Park has been accepted by the Public Works Department. The Government will bear half the expense, and will lend the council the balance, to be repaid by instalments within seven years without interest.

At last night's meeting of the Ashfield Council a letter was read from the Public Works Department covering the Government's approval to the council raising a loan of £30,000.

MICHAEL FERRYS.

BY MRS. HENRY DE LA PASTURE (LADY CLIFFORD).

CHAPTER XXI.—Continued.

He paused again, and said almost irritably, "Why should these small things trouble me since I am once convinced of the reality of the power which they symbolise? Is it likely I could better the policy which Macaulay called "the very masterpiece of human wisdom? I want only to kneel where my angel knelt—to seek consolation where she would have me seek it—to acknowledge that I accept the sign given to me. I have sailed out of a tempest into a dead calm. I'm content to rest there. I don't want to argue, nor to think, nor to struggle any more. I don't realise, even yet, what I've gained, nor what I've lost."

"That's what I mean when I tell you I don't know whether I'm so very unhappy," he said. "I suppose I must be because the things of earth now seem to me of not the slightest consequence; my parting with Winefride but a momentary parting." It is only when one comes down from the heights," he smiled faintly, "to the boredom of convalescence that life seems to stretch before one as so unbearably long and empty without her that I wish I could be done with it once and for all."

Edith's bright eyes scanned his pale, dark face. She noticed with compassion how much he had changed. The large, brown eyes, soft as a spaniel's, were now surrounded by great hollows, and melancholy in spite of the twinkle never wholly banished from their depths. His good looks, the fine shape of his head and features, were even more apparent in his thinness; but her critical observation noted the weakness of that handsome mouth and chin.

There were no firm lines of purpose drawn upon that face by the six and twenty sunny pleasant aimless years of Michael's life; his natural amiability and willingness to please had lent a certain sweetness, as his natural light-heartedness and humour had lent a certain charm to his expression. But the aimlessness had nevertheless stamped its mark upon his face, as surely as innate energy of will and consciousness of fulfilled endeavour had given Edith that steady glance, and firm line of pretty closed lips, and straight poise of the little classic head.

Unconsciously, as she looked at Michael, her expression changed; the latent energy that burned in her dark eyes made itself felt. He moved uneasily.

The thought occurred to him that the belief of disburdening his mind would be dearly paid for if Edith were to disturb the calm and settled melancholy which he termed content. And with his habitual quickness of perception he divined that she was minded to disturb it.

"But since you can't be done with your life by wishing," she said slowly, "and since you have to live through the period of waiting which has been assigned to you by fate—what do you propose to do next?"

He answered more promptly than she expected.

"As soon as the doctor will let me—as soon as I am strong enough—I shall go, for a time at least, to Fort Aloysius."

"I see."

"I am not going, at least not entirely, for my own sake," his desire for her good opinion impelled him to add, "there is a boy there, a young monk, who is dying of consumption. I believe the knowledge of my conversion would help him—if he needed such help, which he most assuredly does not—to die happily. I could tell him what I could not write. It was he who said that if a miracle were needed it would be worked," he ended in a low tone.

"It is kind of you to go to him," she said, with a softer note in her steady voice. "Is that the Brother Emidius of whom you wrote to me?"

"Yes."

He guessed what was in her mind, and said simply: "If they could make a religious of me I should be only too glad. I would give them every chance. But I know it would be of no use. I should get sick to death of the monotony."

She smiled.

"I cannot fancy you a monk."

"Nor I," he said, with the twinkle predominant. "Yet it would save a great deal of trouble to have one's life ordered for one."

"Why should you shirk trouble?"

"I have shirked it all my life. I suppose you despise me for that?"

She looked at him gravely. "It's probably purely physical."

"Not at all," he said, nettled. "I have always had excellent health. If anything, I am rather stronger than the average man of my age."

She rose and held out her hand, and bade him good-bye with the smile that made her face so charming, and a look of kindness in her eyes.

"You are thinking that in that case I ought to do something to justify my existence," he said, deprecatingly.

"I have told you," said Edith sedately, "that it is not given to you to read my thoughts."

"I wonder," said Michael.

CHAPTER XXII.

Edith did not see Michael again until early in the New Year, when in answer to a brief note asking whether he might call upon her, she wrote and told him that, ever since the outbreak of the war in South Africa, and the departure of her two soldier brothers, she had been nursing her uncle at his house in Eaton-place.

The drawing-room in which she awaited Michael's visit was bright with daffodils, and sweet with violets, and a faint sunshine strove to pierce the lace curtains which shrouded the tall windows.

Through those curtains she looked for an instant as a hansom dashed up to the door, and she saw Michael jump out, throw away his cigarette, and pay the driver as a second slighter figure descended.

She moved away, conscious of a quickening of her heart-beat, and also of a very distinct sensation of disappointment and annoyance.

There was a slight flush on her face as the door opened and the two young men entered, bringing with them something of freshness and vitality—a breath of the outside world of life and action—into that atmosphere of the past, which pervaded the old-fashioned room, with its stiffly-arranged antique furniture, and rows of family portraits.

She observed at once that Michael had recovered his health; he was wholesomely bronzed; his face was no longer thin, and his brown eyes were no longer hollow and melancholy-looking.

His companion, on the other hand, looked almost ethereally delicate, with his transparent colouring, fair hair, and large grave blue eyes.

"Sir Bernard Gryffydd," said Michael. "I know I'd no business to bring him without leave, and he did protest; but I wanted you to meet, the more especially since he's going off to South Africa with your brother Humphrey. You know I've just come from Clode. Why weren't you there?"

"I couldn't leave London—even if the war—telegrams—you know Frank has been a prisoner ever since Colenso—and I don't even know where Tom is."

"I know," he said, "you have had an anxious time. It's been bad enough even for those who had no one to be anxious for; and you're not looking strong."

She remembered that note in his voice which expressed so much more sympathy than words could convey.

"I had a breakdown," she confessed. "Not a bad one. So I came here, nominally to look after my uncle, who is not at all well; but he does not give me very much to do. I am resting. If things go well, I might take a little run into the country later, and gather some of these for myself." She smiled, and touched the daffodils nearest.

"I wish you had come to Clode while I was there," he said, regretfully.

"Humphrey was much too busy with his Yeomanry to want me. He wrote a hurried line to say how splendidly you had come forward to help." She relieved Michael of embarrassment by turning quickly to Bernard.

"And you are going out with them?"

Bernard flushed and murmured that Michael had very kindly arranged—

"We're going together," Michael interrupted, answering the question in Edith's eyes with a smile. "Yes, of course I'm going, too. What do you take me for? It's not very kind of you, however, to look so glad."

"I am glad because it proves that your health must be restored," she said lightly.

"I'm well enough to make quite a presentable target," he said.

The presence of Bernard make conversation difficult, and Edith became subtly aware that Michael had brought the boy with him on purpose to avoid the intimate talk, which at the sight of her he now again desired.

They talked industriously of the war for a few minutes longer, and then Michael turned to Bernard, and with his usual frank simplicity suggested that he should take his leave.

"You said you wanted exercise. Why don't you walk to Mrs. Loveden's house? I'll be in time for luncheon, and she won't be sorry to get you all to herself for a bit."

Bernard rose obediently, and Edith was secretly amused by Michael's easy air of authority.

"THE WOMAN PAYS."

On Saturday evening Mr. George Marlow's company staged "The Woman Pays" at the Adelphi Theatre. It is a drama crowded with sensation—cruelty, murder, shipwreck, and wrongful imprisonment, but in the end all the wrongs done are righted, the villain is charged with his many crimes, and confronted by a chain of evidence which it is beyond his power to refute.

Madge, the daughter of Squire Threadgold, is loved by Sid. Armstrong, a young fisherman, while her father's unscrupulous steward, Robert Marchant, also desires her as his wife. Between the squire and Sid's father an old feud existed and Threadgold hates the son just as bitterly as he hated the father. Madge and Sid. are secretly married, and when the Squire hears of this he orders both away. Marchant, in revenge, plots for the ruin of Sid. He bribes Luke Moreland to wreck Sid.'s boat, and then induces Sid. to ship as a sailor on a perilous voyage to the Arctic, lying to him that Madge had run off to London with the village doctor. The Neptune is wrecked, and Sid. is believed to have been lost. Madge returned to her father. But more troubles come. A money-lender is about to sell up the manor because of an unpaid mortgage. Marchant, the steward, offers to pay off the mortgage if Madge will become his wife, and to save her father from being turned out of the ancestral home, she consents. The marriage takes place in the village church, but at the close of the service Sid. Armstrong appears on the scene, and claims Madge to be his wife. Nellie Moreland, whose life had been ruined by Marchant, and who had been wrongfully imprisoned in an insane asylum lest she should inform the authorities of a murder he had committed, also appears at the church and denounces the villain. The final act brings about the happy reunion of the hero and Madge.

The principal character was that of Sid., and Mr. George Cross's quietly effective representation more than satisfied the crowded audience. Miss Nellie Bramley played the role of Madge with sympathy and self-control. Miss Nellie Fergusson as Nell Moreland showed all the intensity of the woman whose sole purpose was to wreak revenge. Mr. T. W. Lloyd, as Robert Marchant, made a capable cruel, relentless conspirator. The brighter side of the piece fell mostly to Miss Ethel Buckley, who was a merry, laughter-loving maid; to Miss Ina Alston (Tabitha, an elderly spinster, ever seeking for a husband), and Mr. Frank Crossley, who was the usual stage Irish servant, always love-making and always witty in retort. Mr. John J. Ennis was a dignified old squire, while Mr. Marcus St. John gave a clever study of the hard-drinking unforgiving father of Nellie Moreland. The scenic effects included a pretty waterfall in the squire's grounds, and the wreck of the Neptune in the Arctic seas.

"ON OUR SELECTION."

After an absence of about 12 months, during which period Mr. Bert Bailey's dramatic company has experienced exceptionally good seasons in several of the neighbouring States and New Zealand, the combination revived Steele Rudd's Australian drama "On Our Selection" at the Palace Theatre on Saturday night. The piece proved so popular here on the occasion of its original production that little doubt existed as to the nature of its welcome back to Sydney. Personally, Mr. Bailey had reason to be satisfied with the cordiality of his reception, and a full house enjoyed an excellent entertainment for three hours. The scene presented in the first act of the drought-stricken selection, while sombre enough at the outset serves to elevate the pluck and determination of "Dad" Rudd; and even in moments of depression there are gleams of humour in the old "Cockie's" attitude, which suggest the happy optimism that in the end carries him on to success and Legislative honours. As everyone knows who has already seen it, "On Our Selection" is replete with fun of the boisterous character, and the merry mood of the audience during the evening sufficiently marked its appreciation of the fact.

Miss Ada Oakley made her first appearance in Australia as the heroine, Kate Rudd, and, though her necessarily quiet and unassuming entry in the first act apparently lacked the encouragement which a Sydney audience usually extends to newcomers, she soon found friends. She played naturally, and, in one scene, where Kate inflicts exemplary verbal chastisement upon the designing villain who pursues her, Miss Oakley showed dramatic power and judgment. She also possesses the advantage of a pleasing presence and a soft but penetrating voice, which never allows the audience to be irritated by a doubt as to what she is talking about. Mr. Bert Bailey repeated his former success as the impulsive and quick-tempered selector, who sturdily battles against adversity, and he received adequate support from Miss Alfreda Bevan, who gave a sterling interpretation of the worried Mrs. Rudd, who so bravely seconds "Dad" in his fight to "make good." Miss Laura Roberts, too, played well as the skittish Sarah Rudd, and the Misses Queenie Sefton and Lilias Adeson as Mrs. White and Lily White respectively, played efficiently.

Mr. Guy Hastings quickly won the sympathy of the audience for his presentment of the hero Sandy, and, avoiding any tendency to rant in the declamatory passages, he played naturally and manfully. Jim Carey, who gives sinister colour to the drama, was in the capable hands of Mr. George Treloar and Mr. George Kensington was good as the vindictive father, John Carey. Mr. Edmund Duggan again made much of the rugged Irish settler Maloney, and he was well backed-up by Messrs. Fred Macdonald (Dave Rudd) and Arthur Bertram (Jim Rudd), Mr. Willie Driscoll, as Uncle Rudd, who likes not work, failed to strike the happy medium, and Mr. Jack P. Lennon, as Cranky Jack, and Mr. Alfred Harford, as Billy Bearup, rendered good service. The revival was under the direction of Mr. Bert Bailey and Mr. Harford, and Mr. Robert Vaughan's scenery was quite up to requirements.

AMUSEMENTS.

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.

Both afternoon and evening great audiences witnessed the performance of "Puss in Boots" at Her Majesty's Theatre. The ballet of Felina's Fairies in the Golden Grove was especially admired. There will be another matinee on Wednesday.

CRITERION THEATRE.

"The Fortune Hunter" filled the Criterion Theatre on Saturday night, when Mr. Fred. Niblo once again showed, with much humour and sufficient sentiment, the love adventure in which, as hero, he figures with Miss Cohan. On Wednesday the usual matinee will be given.

THE LITTLE THEATRE.

At the Little Theatre hearty laughter attended the developments of the new American comedy, "The Man on the Box," in which Mr. Hugh Buckler, as a young military officer disguised as a groom, appears in many amusing situations with Miss Violet Paget. There will be the customary matinee on Thursday.

NATIONAL AMPHITHEATRE.

A number of new turns graced the bill at the National Amphitheatre on Saturday night, and a packed audience showed its appreciation by unstinted applause. A rather novel conception, entitled "Professor Spooferewski and the Premier Danseuse" served as a medium by which Miss Annie Lang introduced some very clever dances. The novelty juggler, Thornton, without the adventitious aid of elaborate paraphernalia, showed his undoubted dexterity to advantage. An orthodox acrobatic turn by the Sampson Bros. completed the newcomers. Paul Gordon created a furore by his sensational tight and slack wire act, the concluding phase, "The Drunk on the Wire," being unique. An artistic success was achieved by Kelly and Wilder in their "Melodies Past and Present," including some operatic selections of merit. Other good numbers were Matthews, Mack, and Co., in a clever Union skit, "Fritz von Liston," the bird whistler, Maurice Chenoweth, and Mik, the calculating dog. The last nights of the five clever Olraes are announced.

"GRAND OPERA" ORGAN RECITAL.

Wagner's masterpiece, "Parsifal," was the intricate study which Mr. Ernest Truman selected for his grand opera organ recital at the Town Hall on Saturday evening, and following, as it did so closely, upon the recent performance of the "Tales of Hoffmann," the contrast was so great that such a fact must have appealed to those who had the good fortune to be present on the previous occasion. So far as the large audience on Saturday night was concerned, it may be said that throughout they listened most attentively to what is unquestionably an elaborate and ultra-classical work, and at the conclusion of the various "curtains" applauded with every degree of appreciation. Incidentally it may be mentioned that at one period Wagner's operas were only tolerated in London. To-day they are the vogue in Europe, and the rage of the metropolis. Wagner presents in "Parsifal" an engrossing allegorical theme, a Legend of the Holy Grail, which is highly instructive. It is, moreover, a work fairly bristling with technical difficulties, which severely tax the executant's skill. Nevertheless, Mr. Truman proved himself to be fully equal to the herculean task. His uniform fingering and manipulating of the "stops" were done with apparent ease, while his playing generally, and particularly in the upper registers, was quite a seductive feature. Mr. Truman's next recital will be that of "Siegfried," by the same composer.

LYCEUM THEATRE.

"The Convict's Secret" is the star film at the Lyceum Theatre this week. This tells in a thrilling way of a grave miscarriage of justice that convicted an innocent man on circumstantial evidence. The acting is good, and there are many situations that appeal to lovers of the dramatic. An entire change of programme will be made to-night, with the exception of "The Convict's Secret."

HUGO'S "LES MISERABLES."

Victor Hugo's story, "Les Miserables," at both the Glaciarium and Olympia, is attracting large audiences. The second part of the drama is of great interest. Perhaps the scene at the Thenardier's Inn, when Valjean presents his orphan protege, Cosette, with the doll, was the most appreciated. The popularity of this film-drama should justify its continuance over the usual time allotted. The English Topical Gazette, "Wild Wales" (scenic), "An Heroic Rescue," and "Look Not Upon the Wine" (comic-dramas), varied the interest of the programmes.

CRYSTAL PALACE THEATRE.

There will be an entire change of programme at the Crystal Palace Theatre to-day, the star film of which will be Sardou's great drama, "Theodora." The title-role is acted by Mdlle. Sahary-Djeli, who has proved herself a worthy successor of Madam Sarah Bernhardt. The production is well staged. "Theodora" will be accompanied by a set of films that will make the programme a very attractive one.

LYRIC THEATRE.

Those who care for sensational situations will be well catered for in the production of "Tigris" a pictorial drama to be presented to-day at the Lyric Theatre. The plot deals with the tigerish instincts of a man who has extraordinary ability in disguising himself. There is strong human interest throughout the drama, supplied by the principal character falling in love with a charming girl. The rest of the programme will be well varied.

COLONIAL THEATRE.

The change of programme at the Colonial Theatre to-day will introduce a series of films that will be new to patrons the star picture of which will be "From the Depths of the Sea." The plot is not a particularly strong one, but it serves to introduce many thrilling situations. The villain is a daring thief, who is chased to a watery grave, and from his dead body a diver removes the important papers that were stolen.

EMPRESS THEATRE.

The star film in to-day's new programme at the Empress Theatre is "The Sacrifice," a drama that is off the beaten track. It deals with the great love that a daughter displays for a ruined father, but is worked out in a way that is entirely different from all plots dealing with sacrifices made by children. There will be an excellent budget of Australian happenings.

PRINCESS THEATRE.

The Bright Sisters, Ruby Tointon, and Arthur Albert take positions in the new minstrel first part this week. The Do Re Mi Trio are heard to really good effects in their musical turn, and the Guillaume Baby and Coy. effort is also an unqualified success.

ALHAMBRA THEATRE.

From May 3 the picture portion of the programme at the Alhambra Theatre will be discontinued, and vaudeville and minstrels will comprise the offering. Artists this week will maintain the reputation for proficiency the house has earned.

GRAND THEATRE.

A novel screening—that of Phyllis Dare and George Grossmith in the Argentine Tango Dance—is an excellent film. The picture will be shown throughout the week. "Tigris" is an unusually powerful detective story, and a liberal sprinkling of comedy brightens up a distinctive selection.

AMERICAN THEATRE.

A pathetic story is vividly portrayed in "Life for a Life" at this house to-day. Included in the programme is a Western picture, "A Stranger in the Ranch," which will appeal to the discriminating picture-goer.

VICTORIA THEATRE.

Two splendid features of the opening programme this week are "Temptations of a Great City" and "The Informer," drama. Comedy is well up to the standard, and other films are included.

AUSTRALIAN THEATRE.

"Memory's Tragic Leap" is a powerful semi-military American sensation to be seen at the Australian Theatre to-day. Western drama figures prominently in "Two Guides," and "For the Sake of a Necklace" is also praiseworthy.

IMPERIAL ROLLER RINK.

The Imperial Roller Rink continues to receive strong support, which is justified by its numerous attractions. There is music at all the sessions. The children are specially catered for each Saturday morning.

CENTENNIAL SKATING PALACE.

This rink will be the scene of unusual festivity to-morrow evening, the occasion being the much-discussed "Tombola Tuesday." A special programme has been arranged, in which Mr. G. C. Irving will give an exhibition of fancy skating.

COLISEUM ROLLER RINK.

Frequenters of this rink are enthusiastic in their praises regarding the splendid condition of the skating surface. Patrons are rapidly increasing in number as the season progresses, and "bumper" floors are being recorded daily.

VICE-REGAL RINK.

Devotees have it that nothing equals skating, especially in the open air. One certainly has the latter advantage at the Vice-Regal Rink. A grand sports programme has been fixed for Thursday.

SYDNEY MADRIGAL SOCIETY.

The first concert of the sixteenth season of the Sydney Madrigal and Chamber Music Society will take place at St. James's Hall on May 8, the remaining dates being July 3, September 11, and November 13. Mr. W. Arundel Orchard will conduct the choral body in beautiful part-songs. Mr. Cyril Monk will lead the Austral String Quartet. Miss Emilie Lambert, newly returned from Europe, will be the vocalist. Intending new subscribers may now enrol as notified.

WIRTH BROS.' CIRCUS.

Wirth Bros.' circus concluded its Sydney season on Saturday night. The amphitheatre was crowded at both the matinee and evening performances. Judging by the attendance on Saturday, the management would have been justified in extending its Sydney season for a couple of weeks. But a tour had already been arranged for the country districts. Ever since the commencement of the season packed houses have been the order of the day. The elephants, the lions and tigers, and Lizzie, the huge, lumbering hippo., have lost none of their popularity. The programme was one of all-round excellence, the management having succeeded in cramming into it an unusual number of thrills. The various turns were applauded most enthusiastically. To-day a tour of the southern line will be commenced.

BENEFIT RECITAL.

With the object of augmenting St. Joseph's College Building Fund, Douglas Ancelon and Stella Chapman, assisted by their pupils, gave a recital in St. James's Hall on Saturday night. These artists usually "draw" a good house, and Saturday was no exception to the rule. In addition to various comedies and recitations of interest, the programme included scenes from "Macbeth," together with excerpts from "As You Like It" and "Conn the Shaughraun." The principals, as usual, acquitted themselves admirably, whilst the majority of the students displayed considerable dramatic ability. The performance was most enjoyable and instructive, encores being frequent.

MISS KINGSBURY'S RECITAL.

Next Thursday three of Miss Stella V. Kingsbury's juvenile pupils—Rita Etherden, Jean Muir, and Birdie Follett—will give an elocutionary recital in Y.M.C.A. Hall. Owing to the plan for same being completely booked, the recital is to be repeated the following Thursday, May 1. Invitations and plan now at Paling's. Only reserved seats guaranteed.

SYDNEY SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA.

The committee of the Sydney Symphony Orchestra announces that they have secured Mlle. Eva Gauthier, the famous Franco-Canadian mezzo-soprano, for the first concert in the Town Hall on Saturday afternoon, May 10. Miss Gauthier will sing with the orchestra of 70 performers, under Mr. Joseph Bradley, the grand aria "Ah perfido" (Beethoven), as well as "Deh vieni non tardar" (Mozart), and "Chanson du tigre" (Victor Massé). The orchestral programme will include "Scotch" Symphony (Mendelssohn), Raff's Cavatina for Violins and Orchestra, as arranged by Joseph Bradley, "In the Steppes of Central Asia" (Borodin), and rhapsody "Espana" (Chabrier), for the first time in Sydney. The plan is at Nicholson's.

GARCIA SCHOOL OF MUSIC.

The students of the Garcia School of Music (directress, Madame Christian), will give a grand concert at the Concordia Hall on Thursday next. An attractive programme is being arranged. The plan is at Nicholson's.

MISS ILMA ELLIOT.

Ilma Elliot, pupil of Madame Christian, gave a concert, which was most successful, in the Rockdale Town Hall, on Wednesday. The soprano was assisted by Misses Eileen Hogan, Eileen Lenane, Mollie Malone, Messrs. Harry Campbell, Frank Mitchell, and C. Walsh. Miss Mollie Malone was the accompanist.

AUSTRAL STRING QUARTET.

At the St. James' Hall on Saturday next the Austral String Quartet (Messrs. Cyril Monk, leader, L. D. Hage, S. Vost Janssen, and Carl Gotsch) will give its first concert of the 1913 season. A very interesting and instructive programme will be presented. The dates for the remaining concerts are June 12, August 5, and September 23. A number of leading artists will assist during the season. The plan is now open at Nicholson's.

SYDNEY HARMONIC CHORAL SOCIETY.

On Saturday evening next an invitation choral concert will be given by the Sydney Harmonic Choral Society at the Concordia Hall. The assisting artists will be Miss Nelly Rouxel, soprano, and Mr. J. Montgomery Stuart, elocutionist. Invitations may be obtained at Nicholson's, where seats may be reserved.

WILDE-HUTCHESON CONCERT.

Madame Florence Wilde, operatic mezzo, and Mr. Frank Hutcheson, pianist, both artists recently arrived from London, will give a concert in the Y.M.C.A. Hall next Saturday evening. Mr. Bryce Carter, 'cellist, and Herr Conrad Alexander, accompanist, will assist. Mr. Hutcheson will play Chopin's "Fantasie in F Minor," a valse by Debussy, an etude by Poldini, York Bowen's "Miniature Suite," and other beautiful pieces. The plan opens to-day at Paling's.

MR. S. MILTON SANDS.

Mr. S. Milton Sands will shortly render Tennyson's celebrated poem, "Enoch Arden," accompanied by Miss Bertha Chalcroft, pianist, and Mr. Cyril Monk, violinist, who will perform the musical accompaniment written by Richard Strauss. Miss Eileen Hogan will be the assisting vocalist. All information may be obtained at Nicholson's.

MISS DOROTHY NALL'S RECITAL.

On Tuesday evening, April 29, Miss Dorothy Nall will give a dramatic recital at St. James' Hall. The young artist, who was originally from Miss Mary Menicol's studio, has already made a name, and her programme will include Shakespearian selections, humorous and dramatic pieces, American and Australian stories. Misses Ruth Conway, Alice Harker, and Mr. Percy French will assist on the musical side. The plan and invitations are at Paling's.

MISS CLARA MACDONALD'S CONCERT.

Miss Clara Macdonald will give a vocal recital on Tuesday, April 29, in the Y.M.C.A. Hall. Miss Macdonald, who is a pupil of the Madame Christian Garcia School of Music, will have the assistance of several prominent artists, including Miss Queenie Fenton, Mr. W. J. Grieves, and Mr. Harold Whittle.

The complimentary concert to Mr. Charles Rolfe will be given in the Concordia Hall on Tuesday, April 29. The popular baritone intends spending a year of study in America. The plan is at Paling's.

Miss Dorothy Andrews, a pianist of Albury, will give an invitation recital in the Y.M.C.A. Hall on Wednesday, April 30. The young artist will be assisted by Miss Leah Myers and Mr. Frank M'Eachen. Cards may be obtained from Mr. Southwell, at Paling's.

MR. WILLIAM MURDOCH'S RECITALS.

On Thursday, 1st, and Tuesday, 6th May next, Sydney music lovers will have a further opportunity of studying the art of Mr. William Murdoch, the pianist who was such a success with Madame Kirkby Lunn during her recent tour. On those dates the brilliant Australian will be heard at the St. James' Hall, under the J. and N. Tait direction, in pieces by Chopin and Beethoven, Debussy and Cesar Franck, Liszt, Brahms, and Bach. Debussy will be represented by no less than 10 items, among them the famous "Children's Corner Suite." All information may be obtained at Nicholson's.

MRS. HAFFENDEN-SMITH'S CONCERTS.

The first of the series of national concerts to be given by Mrs. Haffenden-Smith at the Concordia Hall will take place on Tuesday, May 6. This will be an Australian concert by Australian artists and composers, the proceeds of which will be donated to the Royal Alexandra Hospital for Sick Children. The dates of the remaining concerts are Mondays, June 2, July 7, August 4, September 1 and October 6. ## WAITARA FETE.

The fete in aid of the Waitara Foundling Home, which closed on Saturday night after a most successful week, was a record financially, as well as in point of attendance. On Saturday 700 children from the city and North Sydney schools paid a visit to the grounds. The exact amount of the takings is not available, as several amounts have yet to come in.

A DUBBO GRIEVANCE.

DEPUTATION WAITS ON MR. TREFLE.

DUBBO, Saturday.

A deputation from the Dubbo Parents and Citizens' Association and other civic organisations waited on Mr. Trefle (Minister for Lands and Agriculture), and entered an emphatic protest against the recent instructions of the Department of Public Instruction that all pupils attending the Dubbo District School who have passed the intermediate certificate examination must proceed to Orange or Sydney, or other town, where there is a High school, for the further two-years' course, preparatory to entering the University. It was pointed out that sometime ago the Dubbo District School was permitted to enrol pupils for High school work, and that both Mr. Beeby and Mr. Carmichael had practically promised to establish a High school here. Further, on the word of the Ministers that Dubbo should be granted a High school, and with the sympathy of Mr. Board, Director of Education, a hostel had been founded at Dubbo to provide accommodation for pupils taking up the secondary course here. As a result pupils have been enrolled from many western centres. Secondary education was proceeding most satisfactorily when the order was received that it was to cease. The Anglican community has been put to great expense in establishing the hostel for girls, and they regard the new policy as a breach of faith on the part of the department.

The Minister, in reply, said that there was a dearth of teachers, and secondary and primary education could not proceed satisfactorily in the one building. However, he would place all the facts before his colleague, Mr. Carmichael. Personally, he thought the new arrangements were only of a temporary character.

TERRIFIC PAIN OF ULCERS.

ORDINARY OINTMENTS INTENSIFIED SUFFERING.

A WOMAN'S PERFECT CURE BY ZAM-BUK.

Mrs. Andine West, of 122 Kippax-street, Surry Hills, Sydney, says:—"Eight years ago irritation started on my leg through my stocking rubbing it, this developed into blood poison, which affected one of the various veins. The pain was terrific, and matters went from bad to worse. Finally, my leg broke out into an ulcer of a very bad description, surrounded by violent eruptions, while the itchiness tormented me awfully. To try and get ease, I used to tear and scratch at my leg, but this only made things worse, and at times the irritation was so bad that I feared I would go out of my mind. No matter what remedies I tried, I could not get any relief. Doctor's treatment failed to do me any good, while some of the ointments that were applied caused awful burning pains. Instead of getting better, my leg became worse.

"At last a friend presented me with a supply of Zam-Buk, which I applied to my leg. This gave me so much ease that I decided to obtain more and continue the treatment. I had only been using Zam-Buk a short time when I enjoyed the first night's complete rest that I had had for years. The applications were continued; and all bad matter was withdrawn, the burning, and inflammation subdued, and my leg was cooled and soothed in a wonderful manner. As I progressed with Zam-Buk the disease became less day by day, and all swelling was subdued. I persisted with Zam-Buk until every particle of disease was banished, and my leg completely better and healed perfectly."

Zam-Buk is sold by all chemists and stores at 1/6 and 3/6 per pot.—Advt.

RIVAL ORGANISATIONS.

THE ROLLS AT LAST.

WORK IN THE COUNTRY.

For some years past Liberals have had occasion to envy the superior organisation of the Labour forces. The debacle of 1910 was due quite as much to inferior organisation as to the apathy of the Liberal rank and file, for the main work of the organisers is to rouse the apathetic voters into action.

But now that the 1913 campaign is fairly under way, and the rival organisations in full working order, it is evident that the Liberals have profited by the experience of the past. The organisation is more complete than ever before, and it is, if anything, superior to that of the Labour Socialists. But where the latter excels is in the various electorates where almost every member of a Labour league is a missionary for his or her political faith. If this same zeal were to grip every individual member of the Liberal Associations, the result of the appeal to the country would not be in doubt for a moment.

One reason why Labour is not quite so quick in getting into its stride is that the secretary of the P.L.L., Mr. John Grant, started out on his own Senate campaign before Mr. E. Farrar, M.L.C., returned from the country to take up the work. So when the latter took up the running he was faced with an accumulation of work that has demanded herculean labours to surmount. It has not been an eight-hours-a-day job for Mr. Farrar to get the wheels running smoothly, but now Labour's organisation is again equal to all the demands made upon it. From now till May 31 the Labour army will devote all its energies to the campaign.

There is a feeling in Labour circles that the Senate three are not as positive of victory as they were a month ago. So Messrs. Grant, Watson, and Smith are putting renewed vigour into their addresses, while all the candidates for the House of Representatives are voicing the claims of the Labour three.

Reports from the country still continue to bear witness to the solid work of the Liberal campaigns. In Illawarra the gratifying receptions everywhere accorded Mr. Fuller show that Labour's boasted mortgage on the seat is a long way short of realisation. Enthusiastic and energetic workers are making a decided impression on the doubtful and apathetic electors, while the support forthcoming in the mining centres is particularly gratifying. During the week, Mr. Fuller focussed his attentions on the St. George end of the electorate. This week he addresses meetings in the vicinity of Robertson, and in the following week will again work the mining centres.

Mr. Dawson Moore, Liberal candidate for Macquarie, is now in the Blayney division, where he finds the Liberal forces splendidly organised, as a result of the recent State by-election. Excellent meetings are reported, and victory looms much nearer than at the outset of the campaign.

In Riverina Mr. Falkiner is working his campaign on businesslike lines, and his speeches have created an excellent impression. Under the redistribution scheme, Riverina is a purely farming electorate, with the exception of the Ardlethan tin field, and this fact enormously enhances Mr. Falkiner's prospects. His own geniality and adaptability to the varying circumstances of country campaigning have won him a host of friends. With Mr. R. T. Ball, M.L.A., he recently visited Berrigan and Jerilderie, and had most encouraging receptions.

Liberals recognise that Mr. J. L. Fegan has undertaken a difficult task in contesting the Hunter, but the fight here is by no means a forlorn hope. The democratic sympathies of the Liberal candidate have ensured him favourable hearings in the mining centres, where, on the last occasion, Dr. Liddell received but scanty support. In the Hume there is an evident sympathy on the part of a good number of electors with Sir William Lyne, who has so long represented the electors along the Murray. But the fact that the full strength of the Labour forces is behind him, has led a big section of the farmers and settlers to transfer their allegiance to Mr. Robert Patten. The latter is now in the midst of a strenuous itinerary, which comprises visits and addresses in 62 centres. His strong attacks on the evils of socialism and land nationalisation, are winning the country candidate golden opinions among the men on the land. Mr. J. C. Watson's plea for Sir William Lyne, and the latter's evident leanings to Labour, have still further alienated the pastoralists.

The rolls for the Federal elections have made a belated appearance. They have been hurriedly despatched to the country electorates by both organisations, but they cannot reach the back-country centres till the writs are issued, and there is bound to be a big section of electors disfranchised. A dearth of enrolment cards is, however, now reported from some centres.

THE LABOUR "FUSION."

Mr. Falkiner, of Riverina, is creating a splendid impression by his addresses. In a recent speech he dealt specifically with the matter of the fusion. He said:—

"It is a source of delight for the Socialists to always allude to the Liberal party as the Fusion party, and so make out by inference it is some sort of unholy alliance. A little consideration will therefore do no harm. Mr. Deakin joined Mr. Cook. Why? There must have been some reason. Is it not that Mr. Deakin, after some close acquaintance with our Labour friends, knew more than we did? He saw that party being driven on to the rocks of class hatred and prejudice, bringing strikes and discord into our industrial life, which they could not or would not control. So the two Liberal parties, united in all principles except the fiscal policy, joined together. Now, what is the Labour party? Any protectionists. Yes. Any freetraders? Yes. Mr. Hughes is an ardent one; but is now allied with Mr. Fisher, who promises still higher duties if the referendum is not passed. They are not, however, only freetraders and protectionists. Voting with them is every breed of man 'agin the Government' under the sun—revolutionary socialist, evolutionary socialist, Industrial Workers of the World, and anarchists. So Labour is not a fusion; it is a banding together of persons who have but one object, the destruction of our present industrial conditions. What do they offer in return? Which section of them is to have control of our destinies? These are matters electors might well ponder over.

"Liberalism, on the other hand, gives you a definite and defined goal—the ultimate good of the whole community as far as human effort is capable of controlling the ills that flesh is heir to. As our leader defined it the other day, 'a principle, a living, growing, self-perpetuating organism, greater than any political machinery, old as the everlasting hills, yet young enough, vigorous enough, and enlightened enough for all the requirements of this our twentieth century community.'"

PARRAMATTA.

STRONG LIBERAL CENTRE.

VOTING AT LAST ELECTION.

| | |
|---|---|
| JOSEPH COOK (Liberal) | 11,881 |
| A. E. BROUE (Labour) | 5,579 |
| Majority | 6302 |

Historic Parramatta has been a Liberal stronghold since the first Federal election, and long before that. There never has been much doubt as to the result of the elections there, though at the first election in 1901 Mr. Sandford, of Lithgow, put up a big fight in the Protectionist interest. But since then Mr. Joseph Cook has easily held his own. In 1907 no Labourite could be induced to oppose him. In 1910 he won by a majority of something like 6000. So there is hardly a Labour elector of Parramatta who thinks there is the slightest chance of defeating the Liberal leader.

A couple of weeks ago the Labour executive was fearful that no one could be found to carry its banner, and appeals were made not to give the Liberals a walk-over. So late in the day Mr. O. D. Zieman threw down the gauntlet, entered the lists, and is now busily preparing for the contest. He has taken on a very big contract, quite a forlorn hope. Still Liberals must poll every vote.

Interest naturally centres in the fights of the leaders in this campaign, and for this reason Parramatta will be watched by people far beyond the limits of the constituency.

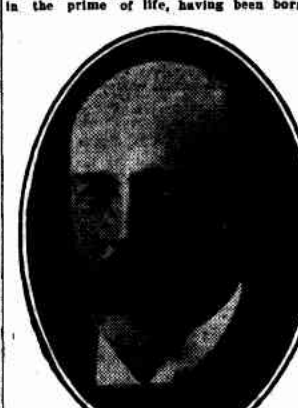
The commissioners who redistributed the electorate, sliced off the north end of Parramatta, a big territory in which were situated Wyong, Gosford, Wiseman's Ferry, Windsor, Richmond, Dural, Riverstone, Castle Hill, and a part of Parramatta town itself. This translates to the Nepean and Robertson electorates 14,257 electors, the vast majority of whom were enthusiastic Liberals.

To equalise matters there has been added to Parramatta that portion of North Sydney, known as Crow's Nest and Chatswood. This brings in 11,884 new voters, leaving the Parramatta electorate with 37,433 electors. While recognising that this alteration of the boundaries must decrease the Liberal majority somewhat, the supporters of Mr. Cook are still abundantly confident of the result.

Mr. Zieman, however, claims that this redistribution is worth several thousand votes to him, and the local Labourites hope that it will just turn the scale in their favour.

The Parramatta Liberals are not leaving anything to chance. They know the demands made upon the leader of a party, and they know that a feeling of false security would be fatal to the cause. So the electorate is being thoroughly organised and canvassed by hosts of willing workers whose feelings of almost certain victory add zest to their self-imposed labours.

The election of Mr. Joseph Cook to the position of Leader of the Federal Opposition, and the consequent appreciative references to his work and his career are still too fresh in the public mind to need recapitulation at length. Mr. Cook's career is the romantic story of the collier boy who, by his own unaided pluck and perseverance, rose to one of the highest positions in the land. He is still in the prime of life, having been born in



MR. JOSEPH COOK, M.P., Liberal Candidate.

Staffordshire in 1860. Starting his life's work in the Silverdale coal mine, he worked late and early to provide himself with an education, and coming to Australia his special qualities were speedily recognised by the Lithgow miners.

Always a pronounced Democrat he had no political ambitions at the outset, but in 1891 he was prevailed on to contest Hartley, in the Labour interest, and in a strenuous contest headed the poll. Subsequently he was elected leader of the first State Labour party, and at a later period Mr. Cook joined the Reid Ministry as Postmaster General.

When the Labour solidarity pledge was framed, the solidarity wing demanded that Mr. Cook should sign it, but he never did sign any political pledge. The unionists opposed him at Hartley, but the miners' president got 170 votes and Mr. Cook 1000. Even since he has been in active political life in the State and Federal Parliaments. As State Postmaster-General and Minister for Agriculture in Mr. Reid's Government his administration was characterised by energy and ability.

At the earnest request of the Parramatta Liberals, backed up by Mr. Reid's personal solicitation, Mr. Cook entered the Federal sphere, where he has since remained. He is a great fighter, a keen debater, and a splendid public speaker. In 1907, after the defeat of the Reid Government, Mr. Cook was appointed Deputy Leader of the Opposition, and bore the brunt of the attack on the Labour Government. In Mr. Deakin's Government he took the portfolio of Defence. He is an enthusiast in the defence of Australia, and looks back with pride to his administration of the Defence Department, the piloting through of the Defence Act of 1909, and the securing of Lord Kitchener's report and visit. He is proud, too, of the work he did for the miners in securing the passing of the Coal Mines Regulation Bill, and the provision he secured for the weighing of all the coal hewn by the miners and the proper payment to them of the money earned. Mr. Cook has always been a democrat. He has done much for the benefit of the workers, especially for those working in the mines. His services to democracy and to the Commonwealth amply justify his claim to the renewed confidence of the people of Parramatta.

Oscar David Zieman is one of the youngest candidate in the field. He is only 28 years of age, but for some years he has been keenly interested in the Labour movement. He is out to win his spurs, and is aiming at big game—no less than the leader of the Commonwealth Liberals. He is a Queenslander, and was educated at the Toowoomba Grammar School. Prior to coming to Greenwich in the Parramatta electorate, he was secretary of the Darlinghurst Labour League, and he took a very prominent part in the last election for East Sydney, which resulted in the return of Mr. West.

Mr. Zieman is engaged in commercial pursuits, and was one of the Government representatives on the Royal Commission on Food Supply. In recent years he has made a particular study of social and economic questions and constitutional matters, and is a firm believer in the efficacy of the Labour doctrines.

He states as a result of a rapid survey of the electorate that the redistribution has helped Labour a great deal, the inclusion of the democratic section of North Sydney being worth a few thousand votes to him. Though late entering the field, the Labour forces are now well organised, and Mr. Zieman is sure that he will put up a big fight.

A meeting of the Liberals of the Parramatta division of the electorate was held on Thursday evening, when there was a good attendance, and addresses were delivered by Mr. T. R. Moxham, M.L.A., and Mr. Archdale Parkhill, secretary of the central body. Mr. Parkhill emphasised the necessity of thorough organisation in order that Mr. Cook's interests might not suffer while that gentleman was doing yeoman service for the party in all centres of the Commonwealth. It was also suggested that, as Mr. Cook was carrying on a reform campaign throughout the Commonwealth at his own expense, his own constituents might see that the local campaign was carried out without expense to Mr. Cook. A strong executive body was elected, and a vigorous campaign will at once be entered into. It was arranged that Messrs. Wade, Bruce Smith, Kelly, and John Garland should visit the electorate, and speak on Mr. Cook's behalf.

ADDRESS BY MR. ZIEMAN.

Mr. O. D. Zieman, the selected Labour candidate, addressed the electors at Harris Park last week. Mr. Zieman dealt first with the questions of naval and military defence, pointing out that the Australian Labour party's policy of a local navy was now being adopted by New Zealand and Canada, so that in the near future, the three dominions would have in the Pacific a combined navy sufficient to compensate for the withdrawal of the British ships nearer to the motherland. In all great national questions the Labour party had shown themselves men of action as compared with their opponents, who continually promised, but never reached performance. It was the Commonwealth Labour Government which had made Australia the most desirable land on earth; its great humanitarian reforms had advertised this country to the world as the place where, during his efficient years, the worker got the best return for his labour and the best living conditions, and where in his old age he would be decently provided for, a free citizen, unhaunted by the grim shadow of the poorhouse. Further, the Federal Labour party had not borrowed one penny abroad; they paid for works out of revenue. This was in pleasing contrast to the financial policy of their fusion predecessors, who had intended to put the Commonwealth in pawn for the building of a Dreadnought oversea. At Parramatta Mr. Cook had denounced the maternity allowance and stated that he favoured the repeal of that measure. This placed Mr. Cook very accurately. The maternity allowance and the cost of broadening the Old Age Pensions Act were provided by revenue from the Federal land tax, which was imposed by the Labour party upon the wealthy landowners of Australia; his opposition to that tax and his desire to repeal the maternity bonus showed very clearly to what quarter Mr. Cook looked for his policy.

Mr. Zieman is receiving good support throughout the electorate.

NEPEAN.

LABOUR'S FORLORN HOPE.

VOTING AT LAST ELECTION.

| | |
|---|---|
| George Cann (Labour) | 11,113 |
| E. K. Bowden (Liberal) | 10,461 |
| Majority | 652 |

The result of the last Federal election for Nepean was one of those surprises which has made April 13, 1910, stand out as a remarkable day in the political annals of New South Wales. After a long record of Liberal victories, the seat was won for Labour by a new man, hitherto unknown in the political arena, albeit he had a sterling record of service in municipal, friendly societies, and trade union circles, to support an impressive and vote-winning speciality. But even his most ardent supporters do not attempt to deny that George Cann's election to the Federal Parliament for Nepean was one of the accidents of that memorable poll.

The fact is that the Liberal candidate, and the Liberal party for that matter, treated the opposition to the sitting Liberal member altogether too lightly. At the previous election, in 1907, the voting was:—Bowden (Liberal), 9749; Dwyer (Labour), 5471; Taylor (Independent), 857. The Liberal majority was 4278 over the Labour opposition, and a majority of 3421 of the whole of the votes polled. The view that the turning of this majority of 4000 votes into a minority of 700 votes was the legitimate expression of the electorate is really not seriously advanced. At the same time, the man who effected such a complete surprise, and won so splendid a victory, demands the respect of his opponents. Mr. Cann has that respect, and the Liberal conduct of the present election shows that the lesson has been learned, and the power of the sitting Labour member is appreciated to the full.

A pleasing feature of the election is the fact that the candidates are on excellent terms with one another. Messrs. Cann and Orchard are both men of equable temperament, and the campaign is being conducted without any of that splenetic rancour which makes so many elections bitter, personal contests.

The redistribution scheme has also had a tremendous effect in reducing Labour's chances of retaining its hold upon Nepean. Summed up briefly, the alterations in the electorate boundaries, based upon the polling at the last election, rob the Labour candidate of over 1500 votes. That is sufficient, even though the Liberal vote is not increased, and supposing the Labour vote remains at the high level set in 1910, to completely wipe out the majority secured by Mr. Cann, and place the Liberal candidate a long way ahead at the top of the poll. The redistribution scheme has taken from the old Nepean the whole of the Lithgow and Wolgan vote, which has gone on to Macquarie, and will doubtless help to improve Mr. Cann's chances there. These two centres polled in 1910 as follows:—Cann 3216, Bowden 901.

Here is a tremendous parcel of Labour votes which Mr. Cann cannot get. The position there is plain—and it is the position practically of the electorate to-day. Other centres which have been struck off are Penrith, Lawson, Blackheath, Leura, and Mount Victoria. Bunched together, these gave Mr. Bowden 2165 votes, as against 1419 given to Mr. Cann. The Liberals there lose a majority of 746. But the new Nepean has had added to it a large portion of the Hawkesbury State electorate. This has been solidly Liberal for all time. On paper, therefore—and all political campaigning is worked out on the basis of paper prospects—it certainly looks as though Labour's is a forlorn hope in the Nepean.

MR. GEO. CANN, M.P., Labour Candidate.

There is another aspect in Nepean which has to be mentioned, though it is of really little account. Mr. A. G. Huie's entry into the field as a freetrade and single-tax candidate is disconcerting; but very little inquiry seems to show that Mr. Huie is not being taken at all seriously. The Liberal section, from whom he hopes to draw his support largely, keenly resents his appearance at all. They say he had the opportunity to offer himself for selection, and they are not now prepared to tolerate his attempt to split the Liberal vote. Mr. Huie will be heard of again doubtless; but that is because his name cannot be left off the ballot paper.

George Cann, M.P., was born at Cramlington, Northumberland, England, in 1871, and is therefore in his 43rd year. He began work in a coalmine at 12 years of age, and then first became connected with the union movement, joining the Northumberland Miners' Union. He came to Australia in 1903, and started work as a coalminer at the Oakey Park colliery. His striking personality quickly won for him recognition among his fellow-workmen, who 12 months afterwards elected him to the office of president of the Western Miners' Association. Two years later Mr. Cann was elected check-weighman at the Oakey Park colliery, which office he held for 12 months, after which he went back to the actual mining. At the 1908 aldermanic elections he was sent into the Lithgow Municipal Council, running into fifth place out of 15 candidates, of whom 12 were wanted.

He successfully contested the Labour selection ballot for Nepean, and at once entered upon a vigorous campaign. The result of that election has been dealt with. But George Cann will be long remembered as the man who threw himself into a comparatively hopeless contest with such effect as to wipe out a 4000 majority, and absolutely win a hitherto strong Liberal seat by over 600 votes. He has for years taken a leading part in trades union, co-operative, friendly society, and church work. He recognises that the redistribution, alterations to the boundaries of his electorate, brings him face to face with a tough proposition, but he is in the thick of the fight and hopes to win again.

MR. R. B. ORCHARD, Liberal Candidate.

Mr. R. B. Orchard was born in Bendigo, Victoria, in 1873—40 years ago. He, however, came to New South Wales when very young, and has lived in this State ever since. The new Liberal candidate for Nepean has many points which recommend him. But, perhaps, his chief claim to recognition is that he has shown his capacity to successfully manage his own business affairs. This is his first essay at a political contest, although he did offer himself for selection for the Hawkesbury, when Mr. Brinsley Hall was chosen to carry the Liberal banner for that State constituency. His selection on this occasion was a very great compliment, and shows more than anything else the powerful Liberal organisation existing in the electorate. Mr. E. K. Bowden, an ex-member for the constituency, was his opponent. There were 4180 members of Liberal leagues entitled to vote. Mr. Orchard got 1801 votes, Mr. Bowden got 1650, and about 700 votes arrived too late to be counted. This is in striking contrast to many selection ballots, where the strength of the poll consists of 100 or 300 votes.

Mr. Orchard has an impressive platform manner, and is a capable speaker. As an elocutionist he has few superiors, at least outside the professional ranks. He holds a number of diplomas and trophies won against all-comers for dramatic recitals. He is also a very well-known singer, and leader of amateur dramatic castes.

He is the president of the New South Wales Watchmakers' and Jewellers' Association. He was also for two years president of the Cornish and Devonshire Association. He is conducting an extremely vigorous campaign, averaging nearly two meetings a day, and he expects to win, but is leaving nothing to chance.

WENTWORTH.

NEW LIBERAL LEAGUE AT WAVERLEY.

Dr. Lamrock, Mayor of Waverley, presided over a well-attended meeting at Lovett's Hall, Spring-street, Waverley, on Friday night, held for the purpose of forming a branch of the Liberal Association. The meeting was a very representative one, and a large number of ladies were present.

Mr. Owen Gilbert delivered an interesting address. He said he had been through the whole of the State, speaking and organising on behalf of the Liberal Association. The downfall of the Liberal party at the last elections was, he considered, due to three primary causes: (1) Lack of organisation, (2) lack of platform speakers, (3) misrepresentation, especially with regard to the actions of the Wade Government. He was, however, pleased to be able to say, as a result of his personal observation, and especially in the country districts, that the electors were awakening to the facts, and the conviction was becoming manifest that the Labour party was a party of promises. Its performances during its three years of office had fallen far short of what the people had a right to expect. It had even failed to comply with the planks of its own platform. It was pledged, for instance, to the abolition of the Upper House, and one of the first things it did was to appoint about a dozen new life members to that House. Nationalisation was another great plank of Labour's platform, yet they had handed over the immense iron and steel industry to private enterprise. The primary obligation of any Government was to administer the law, yet it could not be denied that in this respect—perhaps more than in any other—the Labour Government had miserably failed.

A branch of the Liberal Association was then formed. Dr. Lamrock was elected president, with Aldermen Jackaman and Rogers, Mr. W. Tipper and Mrs. W. Stone as vice-presidents; Alderman Donald, secretary; Alderman Campbell, treasurer; Mr. G. Sands, delegate to Central Executive. An influential organising committee, to work in conjunction with the above-mentioned officers, was elected, consisting of Mesdames Johnston, Cameron, Tipper, Mortimer, Donald, Wilson and Shipp, and Messrs. R. Sands, Johnston, Didums, Jessop, Douglas, and Adams.

MR. WATKINS'S CAMPAIGN.

NATIONAL LINE OF STEAMERS.

NEWCASTLE, Sunday.

Mr. David Watkins, M.P., commenced his campaign for the Federal election last night. So far there is no opposition, and it is expected that the seat will not be contested. Mr. Watkins, in touching upon the work done by the Federal Parliament during the past three years, said that they had built 8475 miles of telegraph lines; 92,000 miles of telephone services; 356 post-offices, and had increased the wages of the postal employees by £112,000, four-fifths of which had gone to men earning less than £3 per week. They proposed to reduce the telephone charge in country districts.

The interest earned on the money obtained from the note issue he said, was £300,000. They had been able to lend the State between 5 and 6 millions of money. The advantage of that to the States was that they avoided the paying of brokerage charges, which were always paid on loans from England. It had been decided to issue a 10s note, which would be ready very shortly. To-day the Treasury stood with a credit balance of two millions. The old-age pensions at the present time amounted to £2,400,000.

The Constitution had been drafted too much on the American model, and they wanted to get away from the American idea. Canada had many of the powers the Commonwealth was asking for to-day. When the South African people were about to federate they wrote to Mr. Deakin, the Prime Minister of Australia at that time, asking for a few hints. The departmental documents comprising the whole of the correspondence showed that Mr. Deakin advised them to take power to legislate as to corporations and companies generally, as the limited words "Foreign corporations and trading and financial corporations" raised a difficult question as to the extent of the power. To-day Mr. Deakin was advising the Australian people to refuse them the same power that he advised the South African people to have. "I recognise that the referendum should not be a party question, either one way or the other," continued the speaker. "It should be the duty of every Federal member to explain it to his constituents. We have not made it a party question."

They proposed to start a national line of steamers, first between Australia and Tasmania. Further wireless telegraphy stations would be established, and they would not stop carrying out that work until the navy of Australia and the navy of the mother country were connected by wireless telegraphy. Now that the lighthouses had been taken over, they would be put into proper order. In dangerous places where there were no lighthouses, they would have them constructed.

A confidence vote for Mr. Watkins was proposed by Mr. H. J. Connell, secretary of the Northern District Labour League, and seconded by Mr. A. M'Credie, president of the Newcastle Political Labour League. Mr. H. P. Browne, president of the Northern District Assembly of the Labour League, occupied the chair.

SIR WILLIAM LYNE.

REFUSAL TO RETIRE.

WAGGA, Saturday.

In view of the state of his health many of Sir William Lyne's most loyal supporters make no secret of their feeling that he ought not to again contest the Hume seat. Some of Sir William's oldest friends and political supporters have made strong representations to him on the subject. It was thought that these would have some effect, and in anticipation of his inability to enter on the campaign it is understood that the Labour party had another candidate ready. All doubts as to Sir Wm. Lyne's intentions have been set at rest, however, by a letter which the secretary of the Wagga Political Labour League has received from Mr. J. C. Watson, as follows:—

After getting your letter I rang up Dr. Nash and made an appointment with him this morning. He then told me that he had seen Sir William last evening, and that his condition had improved considerably during the past few weeks, but that further complete physical rest was imperative to give him a chance of complete recovery. He said that the strain of travelling and addressing meetings would be a grave risk, but that so long as he remained at home any mental work connected with the election was not likely to injure him. I went out and saw Sir William, and found him wonderfully improved as compared with when I last saw him some months ago. Mentally he was quite alert, and talked of going right into the fight. I think, however, I convinced him that he would be unwise to risk travelling and the strain of public meetings. If he keeps away from the electorate I don't think there is any doubt at all that he will be able to pull through all right. You can take it as definite that Sir William is contesting the seat, and will not withdraw on any consideration. I think he is quite well enough to justify the hope that he will be able to do his work in the forthcoming Parliament.

MR. COOK AT CASINO.

AN ENTHUSIASTIC MEETING.

CASINO, Saturday.

Mr. Joseph Cook addressed one of the largest meetings yet held in the School of Arts in opposition to the Federal Government's programme and the proposed alterations in the Constitution. The Mayor (Alderman Mortimer) presided. Mr. Cook received a splendid reception. He opened by criticising caustically and at length a speech made by Mr. D. Watson, Senate candidate. In reply to Mr. Watson's statement that Mr. Cook had been given political birth by the Labour party at Lithgow, he said he had for 16 years the confidence of the people there, and could win the seat back at any time. Lithgow could be won again for the Liberals if the right man contested the seat. He dealt at length with the referendum proposals, and pointed out the great dangers to the national life of the Commonwealth and States if the proposals of the Labour Government were carried. The people should vote against the despotic, socialistic powers asked by the Government. For three years the Labour party had been in power. They would have people believe that trusts and combines were grinding the working man into powder. If such was the case, what had the Government been doing while in power? Why did not they remove oppression as promised? Mr. Watson in his speech said the people were better off during the last three years than ever before, and Mr. Hughes says trusts and combines are putting up prices. The people could not be downtrodden and rolling in wealth at the same time. Mr. Cook quoted high legal authorities to show that Mr. Hughes had power, under the Constitution, to break up monopolies, yet Mr. Hughes says he has not. The Labour party's platform means one word, "Socialism." Referring to the maternity bonus, Mr. Cook said he believed it was abused in many instances. There should be some machinery to see that it was not obtained illegally. The six referendum proposals were the same as two questions which were defeated at the last election, and he appealed to them to defeat them, and thus prevent the Government from cutting the sacred Constitution to pieces. The Liberal policy was to fight for nationhood and freedom of thought and action for all, and not for particular classes.

Mr. W. Massey Greene, M.P., also spoke against the referendum proposals, and received a magnificent reception.

A vote of thanks was accorded the speakers on the motion of Alderman M'Dougall, who referred to Mr. Greene as a brilliant man. He hoped at the elections Mr. Cook would be returned as Prime Minister. Mr. Geikie seconded the motion, which was carried. Cheers were given for Liberalism, Mr. Cook, and Mr. Greene. Mr. Cook spoke for two and a half hours, and had a splendid hearing.

FOOTBALL.

RUGBY UNION.

THE TRIAL GAMES.

On Saturday the various first-grade clubs played their first set of preliminary matches. Generally the form displayed by the new players was good.

UNIVERSITY v GLEBE.

University defeated Glebe at Metters' Sports Ground by 20 points to 6. It was a very fast game, with the Blue and Gold backing up and passing in their best form. Glebe were not at full strength, and a number of new men were tried out. Dr. H. M. Moran refereed. The scorers for the winners were: Leahy, Heath (2), Cooney, Jeckyll, tries; and Cooney converted one and kicked a penalty goal. Westropp and Cruse secured tries for Glebe.

ST. GEORGE v SOUTH SYDNEY.

At Metters' Ground, St. George defeated South Sydney by 16 points to 8. For the winners Taylor, B. and G. Sadlers, and Hachman each crossed the line; while Fleming converted two of the tries. BALMAIN v WESTERN SUBURBS.

At St. Luke's Park, Burwood, Balmain beat Western Suburbs by 8 to 4. For the winners Featherstone and Brett each scored a try, one of which Brett converted. For Western Suburbs Wilkinson kicked a field goal.

MANLY v NEWTOWN.

At Metters' Ground Manly beat Newtown by 6 points to 3, Terry and Fitzgerald being the scorers for the winning team. Tasker kicked a penalty goal for Newtown. Mr. B. W. Rogers refereed.

SECOND GRADE.

RUGBY LEAGUE.

THE PRELIMINARY GAMES.

The practice matches of the N.S.W. Rugby Football League again attracted large attendances, the total takings for the day amounting to £276, an increase of £74 over the previous Saturday's receipts.

The players are rapidly getting into first-class form, and on Saturday some very interesting displays were given. On the Sydney Sports Ground, before an assemblage of 7000, Glebe and South Sydney provided a fine game, which ended 17 all.

SOUTH SYDNEY v GLEBE.

The football season is not likely to produce many matches of a more remarkable character, or more interesting, than that to which several thousand people were treated at the Sydney Sports Ground on Saturday between the above teams. The final stages of the game were of the most exciting nature, and the brilliance of the South Sydney representatives in the last fifteen minutes was something to remember. The early stages of the game, though interesting as trials of speed and strength, provided nothing of note. Led by Chris. M'Kivatt, Glebe took possession and monopolised the scoring. For a time attractive play was characterised by fine passing rushes, a good solid punt, and follows. But it grew monotonous. Twenty minutes before the final whistle Glebe had 17 points to their credit, and South Sydney had only troubled the scorer to the extent of two points, gained from a penalty goal by Hallet. Then Souths rallied, and the game was fast and furious. Spence played magnificently, and put the finishing touches on to three of his clubmates' rushes, and dashed across the line three times in the space of about twelve minutes. Hallet succeeded with each kick at goal, and the match was saved. It ended in equal scores, 17 all. M'Kivatt, Leggo, Burge (2), and Algie were the trygetters for Glebe, but only the last one was converted. Mr. A. Morton gave satisfaction as referee.

NORTH SYDNEY v WESTERN SUBURBS.

This match, on the Agricultural Ground, was a comparative disappointment. It ended in favour of North Sydney by 11 points to 6. The Western Suburbs' representatives failed their supporters very badly. Ten minutes after the first kick-off, it looked like West's game, but their efforts seemed to subside. North Sydney rallied at once in the second half, and Taplin, who scored two tries, treated the spectators to several brilliant flashes of play. From a fine piece of intercepting by Naylor, Eastbrook scored a very neat try. Miller converted the latter try.

BALMAIN v EASTERN SUBURBS.

A large crowd saw a stirring game at Birchgrove Oval, where the local thirteen triumphed over last season's champions by 19 points to 15 points. After Fraser had twice rescued his side from difficulties, Frawley scored for Eastern Suburbs. W. Messenger adding the major points. Balmain's forwards, the majority of whom are weighty men, made constant attacks after this, but were repulsed. However, Wall kicked a penalty goal for Balmain; but Gowenlock put his side further ahead by scoring a try, which Messenger converted. Next Eyles scored a splendid try, which Wall failed to convert. Balmain re-arranged their side at the interval, and so effective were the changes made that the deficit of seven points was quickly wiped off. Wall kicked a penalty goal, and Woodward scored a try, thus placing the teams on an equal footing. Wall put Balmain ahead with a fine try, and he added the points. White scored a try for Eastern Suburbs, but Wall scored another penalty goal, and the end came with Balmain winners by 19 points to 15.

NEWTOWN v ANNANDALE.

Newtown and Annandale met at Erskineville Oval and engaged in a stirring game, play being fast. Considering that the season is so young, good form was shown. At half-time Annandale led by 8 points to 6. In the second spell Annandale were even more aggressive, and wound up with a lead of 14 points to 9. For the winners, Maddocks secured a try, which Ray Norman converted, while Rex Norman got across. For Newtown in the first half Farnsworth and Collins were the successful ones. In the second half, M'Inerney and Reynolds scored tries for the winners; while for Newtown Barnes was the try-getter.

SECOND GRADE.

BALMAIN v EASTERN SUBURBS.

Balmain lost to Eastern Suburbs by 4 points to 8 at Birchgrove Oval. Flannery and Kerr scored tries, and Allen kicked a goal for winners. Joyce kicked two penalty goals for losers.

REDFERN v GROSVENOR.

Played at Birchgrove Oval, Redfern winning by 12 points to 10.

NEWTOWN v ANNANDALE.

Newtown defeated Annandale at Erskineville Oval by 13 points to nil. The try-getters were Nightingale, Scatton, and Russell, while goals were kicked by Beade and Turner.

SOUTH SYDNEY v GLEBE.

South Sydney met and defeated Glebe on the Sydney Sports Ground by 15 to nil. The losers were outclassed. W. E. Anderson and Drummond scored tries, which were duly converted by Dymont (2) and Darmody.

THIRD GRADE.

SOUTH SYDNEY v GLEBE.

South Sydney won by 5 points to 3 over Glebe at the Sports Ground. Riddell, for the winners (converted by Rigney), and Glover for Glebe were the try-getters.

BALMAIN v EASTERN SUBURBS.

Played at Birchgrove, Eastern Suburbs winning by a penalty goal (2 points) to nil, Walsh kicking just on time.

NEWTOWN v ANNANDALE.

Newtown defeated Annandale by 8 to nil, at Erskineville Oval. Short and Bones secured tries, and Mansfield added a goal.

A PLAYER ROBBED.

H. Morton, a member of the Grosvenor side, which played Redfern at Birchgrove Oval, had the sum of 25s stolen from his clothes, which he left in the dressing-room. His colleagues all left their belongings with a supporter while they were playing.

LEAGUE NOTES.

Next Saturday the practice matches include the game between Glebe and Newtown at the Sports Ground, at 3.15; Eastern Suburbs v South Sydney, on ground to be allotted; Annandale v Western Suburbs, ground to be allotted; South Sydney v Balmain, ground to be allotted.

If the arrangement suggested by Mr. E. R. Larkin be carried out, two of the first grade teams will visit Bathurst next Saturday to give an exhibition match. In that case the fixtures other than the one between Glebe and Newtown will be rearranged.

The match between Glebe and Newtown will be played as a benefit to W. G. Neill and L. Cubitt, who were unfortunate enough to sustain a fractured leg each while playing last season.

The entries for the second and third grade competitions will close to-morrow at 5 p.m.

At Wednesday's meeting of the general committee attention will be given to the grading of the referees for the season.

At a meeting to be held next Friday, in the Town Hall Hotel, Oxford-street, at 8 p.m., an attempt will be made to establish a Junior Referees' Association in the Eastern Suburbs district.

AUSTRALIAN.

PREPARING FOR THE SEASON.

At a meeting of the permit and umpire committee of the New South Wales League held on Friday the following clearances were endorsed:—S. West, Newtown to Lefroy Club, Tasmania; O. Mintenett, Kaponda to Broken Hill; J. Fisher, East Sydney to Broken Hill; L. Carter and E. Meadowcroft, South Sydney to Tasmania; J. G. Borthwick, Victoria to Broken Hill; G. A. Baile, South Australia to Broken Hill; L. O'Brien, North Adelaide to Broken Hill; J. Humphries, South Australia to Broken Hill; L. E. Bennison, N.S.W. to Tasmania; R. Young, Paddington to Tasmania; Chas. P. Whittle, Newtown to Tasmania; J. A. Woods, Newtown to West Torrens (S.A.); Arthur Chiltern, New South Wales to South Australia; R. Ellis, New South Wales to Victoria; N. Taylor, New South Wales to East Fremantle; W. J. Strang, Paddington to South Melbourne.

Under the new rules of the Australasian Council the New South Wales League, as the controlling body in this State, is required to endorse all clearances to and from Broken Hill, hence the inclusion in the clearance list of the players from States other than New South Wales requiring clearances to Broken Hill. The South Australian League wrote requesting the New South Wales League to enter into arrangements whereby it might deal direct with Broken Hill in the matter of clearances. The permit committee decided not to accede to the request, unless by consent of the Australasian Council.

Seventeen applications were received for the positions of field and boundary umpires during the coming season.

FOOTBALL ASSOCIATION.—SECOND GRADE.

At the second annual meeting of the New South Wales Australian Football Association, Second Grade, held on Friday, the following office-bearers for 1913 season were elected:—Patron, Mr. R. Monro King; president, Mr. E. W. Quinn; hon. secretary, Mr. A. Provan; hon. treasurer, Mr. H. Marshall. The annual report and balance-sheet, which were adopted, reflect the highest credit on the association's executive officers. For a junior association to plan out and carry into effect a touring visit to South Australia, Victoria, and the south-eastern towns of New South Wales was a big undertaking. That the association succeeded may be gleaned from the following item culled from the past season's record:—Interstate tour to South Australia and Victoria:—Receipts, £230 15s; expenditure, £231 10s.

SATURDAY'S PRACTICE MATCHES.

The various clubs indulged in practice games on Moore Park and at the Australian football ground, when various players were tried out.

THE SEASON'S FIXTURES.

The league competition matches will start on May 3, instead of April 26, as originally intended. The season's games will take place in the following order:—

Second set: Paddington v East Sydney, North Sydney v Newtown, Balmain v South Sydney, Sydney bye.

The second round will be in the same order.

Beyond the opening set on May 3, the dates of the other fixtures have been left open, pending replies from Victoria, South Australia, Western Australia, Tasmania, and Queensland as to interstate visits. When such come to hand the full programme of the season will be issued.

RAILWAY CARNIVAL.

ADELAIDE, Sunday.

The final match in the interstate railway football carnival was played yesterday. After a rough game South Australia defeated Victoria by 9 goals 12 behinds against 4 goals 10 behinds. Both teams had beaten New South Wales. The next carnival will be held at Melbourne in 1914, and Queensland, Western Australia, and Tasmania are to be invited to compete. The visitors leave for home on Monday.

BRITISH ASSOCIATION.

Saturday's practice games were keenly contested, and, although concert pitch has not yet been attained, the victories of Newtown and Annandale are not without significance. Balmain and Sydney failed for the second time, but Glebe and Granville continued to add to their laurels. A large number of enthusiasts mustered at Epping, the headquarters of the association, where three games were played.

GLEBE v BURNS CLUB.

Played at Epping, and won by Glebe 3 to nil.

Burns Club.—Douglas, Fraser, Logan, Hodge, Scott, Hetherington, M'Donald, Smith, Baker, Bird, and Mackenzie.

Glebe.—McGugan, S. Strahan, Hall, Kelly, M'Gee, G. Strahan, Tolmer, Collins, Brailey, Braund, and Webb.

Referee, A. Smith.

The game opened somewhat raggedly, combination being disregarded. Baker and Mackenzie troubled the Glebe defence, but found S. Strahan alert. Collins and Braund showed out for Glebe, but, like their opponents, were very inferior in shooting. There was no score at the interval. In the second half Glebe combination improved, consequently Burns were kept on the defensive. Logan and Fraser, when pressed, gave away corner kicks, and the final figures were 3-0 in Glebe's favour.

CANTERBURY v WEST SYDNEY.

Played at Epping, resulting in a scoreless draw.

West Sydney.—Quill, Warrior, Anderson, Brown, Hodge, O'Brien, H. Fleming, Dolan, Pinkerton, Donald and A. Quill.

Canterbury.—Geering, Lane, Piggott, Bannister, Haigh, McBeth, Musgrave, F. Smith, Melbuish, Holbert, and Billet.

Referee, J. L. Shepherd.

This game showed more sparkle than its predecessor. Each set of forwards placed well, testing the opposing defence. Lane and Warrior showed out prominently. Smith, with a fine shot, hit the bar, the ball bounding into the field. No score was registered at half-time. Lane and McBeth found their defensive powers tested by the nippy attack of West Sydney. Full time sounded with no score registered.

ANNANDALE v SYDNEY.

Played at Epping. Annandale won by 2-1.

Annandale.—Lowe, Newson, Keith, Barnes, Chalmers, Nash, Bond, Ness, Butcher, Hillyard, and Towle.

Sydney.—Le Lean, Hughes, Worley, Rigby, Love, Mill, Burroughes, Gallagher, Hewitt, Herron, and Knight.

Annandale quickly attacked, but a good centre by Towle was wasted. Chalmers checked for Sydney, and Worley staved off a likely-looking rush. Eventually, some good combination by Butcher, Towle, Bond, and Hillyard resulted in the latter scoring for Annandale. Gallagher and Burroughes then troubled Annandale's defence, till Barnes relieved. Herron was busy after the interval, a terrific drive and a splendid clearance by Lowe causing great applause. Sydney came again, and Herron scored one for Sydney. Full time sounded, with no further additions to the figures.

GRANVILLE v NORTHERN SUBURBS.

Played at Clyde; the locals won a close game, 2 to 1.

Granville: Martin, Pearson, Gill, Watkins, Doherty, R. Fairweather, L. Peaty, Barrell, Turrell, Wilson, and Meilleur-Smith. Northern Suburbs: Richards, Turnbull, Evans, Oxs, Brown, Hibbard, Cornwall, Green, Tomblin, M'Gowan, and Williams. Referee: Ian Davidson.

Play in the first half was very even. Smith showed out prominently for the locals, and Turnbull was a sturdy defender. Richards and Martin had some fine shots to clear, and, at the interval there was no score. Granville pressed on resuming, and Barrell scored. Smith's meritorious field work resulted in a fine goal. Norths were on their mettle, and, despite strenuous defence by Pearson, Watkins, and Doherty, Green found the net, making the final scores: Granville 2, Northern Suburbs 1.

BALMAIN v NEWTOWN.

Played at Easton Park, Newtown won 3 to 1.

Balmain: Chapman, Latta, Thompson, Pryde, Moore, Richards, Charlton, Robertson, Graham, J. Ferguson, and O'Hehir. Newtown: Mitchell, Bywater, Dennis, Newton, Carmichael, Dickson, Podmore, Anderson, Bruce, Lawrence, Blake. Referee, S. Rose.

Newtown at once troubled Balmain, Moore, Latta, and Thompson staving them off. Bruce and Blake set the visitors going again, and this move was successfully capped by Dixon. The local forwards found Dennis, Bywater, and Mitchell solid, and Blake's speed kept their defence busy. Prior to the interval he notched Newtown's second goal. Balmain came early in the second half, and a good movement by Moore enabled Robertson to pierce Newtown's defence. Mitchell then had a fusilade of shots to clear, and he was applauded for splendid work. Blake, prior to full time, netted Newtown's third.

Balmain II. and Glebe Reserves drew at Easton Park, 2 all. Glebe led at the interval, 2 to 0 (Milton and Teasel), but M'Donald and Harris levelled for Balmain in the second half.

At Gladesville, the hospital team beat H.M.S. Fantome, 3 to 0. Ashdown (2) and Simmonds scored. The visitors were entertained after the match.

Northern Suburbs visited Callan Park and were beaten 3 to 0, Baker doing the "hat trick."

Police were in a scoring vein at Bourke-street area, scoring five (four by their centre forward) to Caledonian's three.

The game listed for Sydenham was not played.

Sydney Reserves beat Botany United at Boorrallee Park, 4-0; and Bennett and Cosdriff scored Railway's two goals against Pyrmont Church at Moore Park.

The all-age competition of the Junior Association opened on Saturday last. Victoria Park and Pyrmont Rangers drew; Kelso and Dubos, for Pyrmont, and Keen and Glenda for Victoria Park were the scorers; Balmain Caledonians defeated St. Paul's by 4 goals to 1; Annandale and Glebe United drew, one each—Bray and Clements scored; Balmain Kia Ora beat St. David's by 4 goals to 0; Pyrmont Royals beat Rockdale St. John's B by 3 goals to 1, Murphy, M'Lean, and Walsh scoring. The preliminary match at Clyde—Pirates v Holroyd—resulted in a scoreless draw. At Parramatta, Cumberland district beat Pyrmont Rangers' Juveniles, 2 to 0; Balmain Kia Ora beat Leichhardt Federal, 1 to 0; Enmore beat Kogarah S.P.S., 3 to 1, at Erskineville Park.

LEAGUE v UNION.

MR. LARKIN REPLIES TO MR. REID.

BATHURST, Saturday.

Mr. E. R. Larkin, secretary of the New South Wales Rugby League, delivered a vigorous reply in the Masonic Hall last night to certain representations made against the League game. He came to Bathurst on the invitation of those desiring the introduction of the new game here. Mr. Larkin expressed regret at the remarks made by Mr. Reid at the annual meeting of the Bathurst Rugby Union Football Club. That gentleman stated that the League authorities would induce them by promises. Wherever the League had been established it had fulfilled any promises made by the governing body. The injuries, common in the old game, were kept out of the newer game, which was a much better and cleaner one than the union. The possibilities of inter-district competition were greatly than in the old game, which was now "down and out," and if Bathurst players were going to stop in the Rugby Union they were going to be lonely. The League was said to be professional, and all those concerned with it were branded as professionals by the Amateur Sporting Federation, but is was only professional in this respect, that if a man lost time and suffered in any way through playing the game he was reimbursed out of the profits. It seemed fair and reasonable to him, and all who had been associated with football, for the profits of the gate to be utilised in recompensing the men.

Mr. T. Phelan, vice-president of the League, said that he did not wish to attack the New South Wales Athletic Association, but an action by that body, that men who had won medals had to return them because they played the League game, could only be characterised as rotten. The Sporting Federation was only a misnomer: it was the New South Wales Rugby Union.

Later in the evening Mr. Larkin stated that a League match between Sydney teams would be played on the local sports ground next Saturday.

On the motion of Mr. J. T. McNally, seconded by Mr. G. Greene, it was enthusiastically decided to form a branch of the game in Bathurst. The following officers were then elected:—Patron, Mr. A. Rigby; president, Mr. Michael Meagher; vice-presidents, Messrs. J. Dibley, A. Thorman, A. Hurford, F. Kaiser, S. C. S. Bazely, W. J. McPhillamy, A. N. Wood, J. Bain, J. Mockler, J. Miller, M.L.A., A. E. Sambrook; secretary pro tem., Mr. L. Critchley; treasurer, Mr. J. McNally.

THE FINAL ROUND.

PREMIERSHIP STILL IN ABEYANCE.

NORTH SYDNEY SCORES 271 AGAINST SYDNEY.

HOPKINS MAKES 146.

UNIVERSITY'S STRONG POSITION AGAINST PADDINGTON.

The deferred and curtailed ninth round—which is also the last—of first-grade matches was commenced on Saturday, when only two fixtures were gone on with. These are the only ones that have a bearing on the premiership, and are being contested by North Sydney and Sydney at North Sydney Oval, and University and Paddington at University Oval. The wickets, on account of the heavy rains which fell on Friday night and early on Saturday morning, were very wet. There was a good attendance at each ground.

Of course, the race for the season's honours lies between North Sydney and University, with the former, who are leading by two points, the favourites. However, on Saturday neither side gained any material advantage as regards point-notching, though in this respect University performed with slightly the greater credit, having dismissed Paddington, after sending them in, for 155, and then scored 47 without loss, thus leaving only a deficit of 108 to wipe off. North Sydney, after being sent in by Sydney, scored 271, and then dismissed two of their opponents for 16. Given fine weather and good wickets on Saturday next it looks as if the rival clubs will each gain an advantage on the first innings; if so, North Sydney will be premiers. All they have to do is to dismiss eight Sydney batsmen for fewer than 256 runs. However, Sydney may rise to the occasion, and it would not be a wonderful performance, either, if they made the necessary runs.

Following are the results of Saturday's play:—

North Sydney, 271, against Sydney, two for 16.

University, none for 47, against Paddington, 155.

THE HONOUR LIST.

Batting.

A. J. Hopkins, 146 (102 minutes).

Dr. J. Hughes, 61.

Bowling.

H. L. Collins, seven for 103.

At North Sydney Oval, Sydney won the toss, and gave the local team first use of a rain-damaged wicket. The sodden nature of the ground and the long grass on the football area were not conducive to fast scoring, but, thanks principally to a brilliant display by Hopkins, the total reached 271 as a result of 140 minutes' batting. The first three overs produced 23 runs, and Hopkins scored the first 21 runs made off the bat, R. V. Minnett in the meantime having played only two balls. However, Hopkins should have been out in the second over when 11, an easy chance at mid-on off Coffey being refused by Rowe. The scoring was fast, 50 appearing in 25 minutes. At 61 Minnett hit Collins sharply to Coffey close in at mid-off, and the fieldsman effected a good catch. Poidevin did not stay long, but Hall helped his captain to add 171 for the third wicket. His 36 was a neat effort, marred only by a chance at 25 to Rowe at long-on off Finneran.

Hopkins was not out. He batted 102 minutes for 146, including seven sixes and fifteen fours. His second 50 occupied only 16 minutes. Such a dashing innings was, naturally, not without blemish. At 39, Coffey, at point, missed a possible chance off Asher. At 59, after two successive sixes off Collins, Fusedale, on the track, at straight hit, dropped a high drive off the next ball. In the outfield also Morgan might have effected a catch after a good run, but was slow in starting.

With four out for 228 at 4.15, North Sydney might have closed their innings, but Hopkins preferred to continue. The subsequent batting was careless, and wickets fell so quickly that the innings closed for 271 half an hour later. The fielding of Sydney was weak, many chances being dropped. Some good catches, however, were brought off by Coffey, Collins, and Rowe (2). The bowlers were unable to make any effective use of the damaged wicket, which proved easy, the ball cutting through. Collins bore the brunt of the attack, sending down 111 balls for 103 runs and seven wickets. He bowled really well, and had the first four wickets for 90, in a total of 228. Cohen, bowling for the first time this season, profited by the carelessness of the later batsmen, and secured three wickets for 31. Coffey and Finneran were severely punished, and Asher was also unsuccessful, although they all had chances missed off their bowling.

In twenty-five minutes Sydney lost two wickets for 16 runs, and in addition Coffey was missed, so that had the closure been applied the extra half hour would probably have strengthened North Sydney's position. As it is, the game is in favour of the competition leaders, but with a fine day and a good wicket next Saturday Sydney's remaining batsmen may rise to the occasion, and disclose some of the form shown against Balmain and Glebe. It must not be forgotten, too, that Dr H. V. Hordern, the Shoremen's greatest bowler, is not available for this match.

At the University Oval, where University and Paddington started their match, a heavy shower fell during the forenoon, and the wicket was very wet, and the outfield very sodden; in fact, as late as 4.30 the ball splashed the water into the air as it sped to the boundary on the eastern side of the ground. Bowlers and batsmen used sawdust to ensure a surer foothold, but the wicket continued easy right up to the drawing of stumps.

Massie and Stack began the bowling against Cody and Sayle, but the former, who is a big, heavy, though agile, man, experienced difficulty in keeping his feet, and changed over to the northern end. Minnett, who went on at Massie's end, slipped to an all fours attitude after delivering his first ball. The batsmen were also ill at ease on their feet, though the ball cut out through the turf, and was not very difficult to watch.

The score slowly mounted to 30, then Minnett caught and bowled Cody for 10, a performance Massie repeated when he dismissed M'Cloy seven runs later. With Noble in, the half-century appeared. Here Sayle was given out l.b.w to a straight one from Stack, which appeared to be rising. Sayle played neat cricket. Noble did not last much longer, Massie, catching him splendidly low down at first slip, off Farrar, the fieldsman reaching forward and getting his right hand under the ball. Munn, Mahoney, and Smedley were quickly dismissed, and the record was seven wickets for 86.

At this juncture Dr. James Hughes, the famous "old" Rugby Union forward, found a very useful partner in Bruce Stafford, and the score was raised to 138 before Hughes was magnificently caught at forward square-leg on the boundary by Tozer, after a 35 yards fast sprint from long-on. Hughes was the only batsman to attack the bowling, and, despite a couple of chances, played entertaining cricket, his straight driving and pull strokes having plenty of power behind them. He hit one six and nine fours in compiling 61 runs, in as many minutes. The last two wickets added 17 runs. Stafford's 10, which included a "sixer," was a very serviceable effort.

University fielded fairly well on the ground, but Willcocks missed Hughes at forward square-leg, close in, off Single, who also had Stafford missed at long-on by Tozer, who, however, was running in fast when he got the ball into his hands. University gave way 25 sundries—the second highest "score" in the innings. However, Massie bowled six no-balls.

University's bowlers were placed at a disadvantage by the wet conditions underfoot; nevertheless they performed well, Stack taking three for 27 and Farrar three for 17. Massie sent down 102 balls for 47 runs and one wicket. None of the bowlers could make the greasy ball break to any appreciable extent on the easy wicket.

Barber and Willcocks had half-an-hour's batting—stumps were drawn at 5.30 on account of the bad light—and knocked up 47 without being separated, Barber contributing 23 and Willcocks 15. The former played beautiful cricket, his square-cutting being superb. However, he snicked one ball from Stafford on to Noble's boot at first slip, when he was 19. Willcocks's form, as usual, was very good, and his style beyond reproach. University require only 109 runs to gain a lead on the first innings, but this will be of no avail if North Sydney defeat Sydney or play a tie with them.

RED ROUGH HANDS MADE SOFT AND WHITE.
For red, rough, chapped and bleeding hands, dry, fissured, itching, burning palms, and painful finger-ends, with shapeless nails, a one-night Cuticura treatment works wonders. Directions: Soak the hands on retiring, in hot water and Cuticura Soap. Dry, anoint with Cuticura Ointment, and wear soft bandages or old, loose gloves, during the night. These pure, sweet, and gentle emollients preserve the hands, prevent redness, roughness and chapping, and impart in a single night that velvety softness and whiteness so much desired by women. For those whose occupations tend to injure the hands, Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment are wonderful.
Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold throughout the world, a sample of each, with 32-page Skin Book, will be mailed free on application to R. Towns, and Co., Dept. M. Sydney, N.S.W.—Advt.

Why the Bust Bodice is Necessary in Perfect Gowning.

The Bust Bodice is a Necessity in the wardrobe of the woman with a full or stout figure. It does the work that the corset cannot do, controls the flesh above the Corset lines, where the corset does not go. It gives a smooth appearance to the bust, hides the ridge between the shoulder blades, and keeps the flesh at back perfectly flat and straight. The Bust Bodice is an absolute necessity when wearing a tailor-made costume. The values we list here are excellent. Made with every latest improvement, from strong batiste, longcloth, calico, and net, and the prices we ask are very reasonable.

THE UNIVERSITY.

ELECTION OF SENATE.

TO-DAY'S POLL.

AN IMPORTANT CONTEST.

The most interesting University election on record will be closed to-day by a personal ballot at the Royal Society's rooms, 5 Elizabeth-street. The total number of voters on the roll is 2750, and 1400 papers were issued up to last night. It is anticipated that between three and four hundred additional votes will be recorded to-day. Polling takes place between the hours of 10 o'clock and 5.

The present election is the first to be conducted under the University Amendment Act, 1912, and under the provisions of the Act voters have been able to record their votes by post for the first time. A large body of people have availed themselves of this privilege. The new Act abolishes life tenure of members of the University senate, save in two cases, those of the present Chancellor and the Vice-Chancellor. Under the new Act the franchise is restricted to the following persons, who must be 21 years old:—Fellows, officials declared by the Act to have the same rights and privileges within the University as masters and doctors; graduates who keep their names on the register and have taken the degree of master or doctor within the University; bachelors and all other persons who obtain any certificate which the senate by-law declares equivalent to the degree of bachelor.

Two parties are in the field. One advocates the return of nine of the retiring senators available for re-election as part of the 13 to be elected; and the other, known as the progressive party, is in favour of the re-election of several of the retiring senators, but at the same time favours the infusion of fresh blood into the controlling body. There are also two independent candidates, neither of whom is a member of the retiring senate, nor included in the progressive bunch.

THE CANDIDATES.

GENERAL COMMITTEE'S NOMINATIONS.

The general committee of graduates asks all graduates to give nine of their votes to the following:—

Henry Charles Lennox Anderson, M.A.
Sir William Portus Cullen, K.C.M.G., M.A., LL.D.
Mr. Justice David Gilbert Ferguson, B.A.
Sir Philip Sydney Jones, Kt., M.D.
Edward William Knox.
Frank Leverrier, B.A., B.Sc., K.C.
Albert Dathurst Piddington, B.A.
Cecil Purser, B.A., M.B., Ch.M.
Richard Teece, F.I.A., F.F.A.

PROGRESSIVE PARTY'S NOMINATIONS.

Thomas Rainsford Bavin, B.A., LL.B.
George Stephenson Beeby, M.L.A.
John Job Crew Bradfield, M.E.
Sir William Portus Cullen, K.C.M.G., M.A., LL.D.
Mr. Justice David Gilbert Ferguson, B.A.
Frank Leverrier, B.A., B.Sc., K.C.
Miss Louisa Macdonald, M.A.
Francis Antill Pockley, M.D.
John Michael Taylor, M.A., LL.B.

GENERAL COMMITTEE'S CLAIMS.

Following are the claims to graduates' support of the nine retiring senators:—

1. None of the persons already appointed, and none of the other candidates, have any experience of University management. These nine retiring senators have ample experience.
2. No objection can be taken to any of the nine for lack of interest in the work of the University, or neglect of duty as a senator. The report of the Senate for 1911, in the current issue of the calendar, shows a very high record of attendances for each one at that time in office.
3. No denial is possible of the fact that the University has prospered and made extraordinary progress under control of the senate at the meetings of which they have been assiduous in their attendance.
4. No fair discrimination being possible between them on grounds of attention to duty, the success of the whole senate raises a presumption of real value in favour of them individually.
5. No consideration, such as might reasonably have been expected, is given them by the Act. They are left to take their chance of finding it among graduates in a confusion of candidatures.
6. No university can show a more liberal treatment than that given by the Sydney senate to the scientific and utilitarian branches of university work. Since 1893 the number of professors in those branches has doubled, and the number of lecturers quadrupled. The nine retiring senators have certainly not unduly favoured traditional as against modern studies, for nothing to compare with this phenomenal progress has taken place in arts.
7. No higher competence in finance can be found in this State than already exists in the men of affairs among the nine. That competence, made the more valuable through long experience of university finance, is now essential for safety, since the Act imposes great obligations on the University with decreasing financial provision.
8. No failure to develop and safeguard the University, so far as funds permitted, has ever been proved against the present senate. The new Act will need most careful administration under new conditions of direct political and Governmental influence. It is fair to assume that the nine retiring senators may be trusted, if re-elected, to be successful in the future, as in the past, with problems in which experience will be the best guide.
9. No hostility to those who had the life-tenure, now abolished, was ever involved in graduates' objection to life-tenure itself. The nine retiring senators have shown, by becoming candidates, their loyal adherence to the principle of limited tenure.
10. No question can linger in the mind of any elector as to the independence of position and character of these nine candidates.

PROGRESSIVE PARTY'S CLAIMS.

The Progressive party asks graduates to support its candidates for the following reasons:—

1.—That the majority of the members of the old senate have already been stubbornly opposed to reform.
2.—That their attitude in the past to questions of reform is the only indication of what their attitude will be to similar questions in the future.
3.—That the Progressive candidates were selected in public meeting after full discussion, and no limitation was placed upon the choice of candidates.
4.—That the candidates selected are all persons of wide experience, have held responsible and distinguished positions, and are progressive.
5.—That they represent the varied important interests of the University.
6.—That neither the women graduates nor the graduates in engineering are directly represented on the old senate; both are represented in the Progressive selection.
7.—That the University is essentially an educational institution; and in the choice of senators educational interests should not be subordinated to business interests.
8.—That the candidates selected have shown themselves competent to deal with financial problems quite as difficult as any that will be likely to arise in connection with the University.
9. That the University can at any time command the best independent financial advice in Sydney, but the senators themselves should be educationalists.
10.—That the funds necessary for University expansion will only be forthcoming if the senate shapes university education to meet the needs of the community.
11.—That, under the old regime, the University has been a non-popular institution.
12.—That, in its avoidance of publicity and irresponsiveness to opinion the retiring senate has too closely resembled the board of directors of a private company.
13.—That only by pursuing a vigorous progressive policy will the University meet the needs of the community.
14.—That the Progressive proposals are in no sense "revolutionary."
15.—That, under these proposals, "continuity" in knowledge and experience is amply safeguarded.
16. That "continuity" in policy is not necessarily desirable.
17.—That the aim of the progressive party is to secure the services of men of a certain intellectual temper, and leave to them the development of its principles.
18.—That conservatism involves the "saving" of the bad as well as of the good. The Progressives seek to preserve only the good.
19. That men of new ideas are imperatively needed if the University is to fulfil its national purposes.
20.—That it is the right, as well as the duty, of graduates to select the ten "best" representatives for the senate.
21. That the old senate has not a monopoly of good men.

MR. CARMICHAEL AND THE UNIVERSITY SENATE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Mr. Carmichael has some remarks about me in your issue of to-day which it may be worth while to answer in so far as they concern the ensuing election.

He finds my reference to his ignorance of University matters in "questionable taste," but I fear I cannot withdraw the expression, as only so are some of the defects of the Act to be explained. He says that in his "investigation" he went beyond Sydney University and had the guidance of various qualified people, all save the Under-Secretary for the Department of Public Instruction unnamed. He certainly had none from the University staff as a body; and one might think that it would be peculiarly interested and expert in the subject, and ought at least to have been consulted. In the second place, these researches of Mr. Carmichael's did not lead to much result in the first bill, with which alone he can be credited, for it was a very crude and ill-considered effort. Convocation, for example, will not forget the meagre representation assigned to it, or that that representation was increased only by the efforts of the so-called Conservative Chancellor acting on behalf of the so-called Conservative Senate. And from which of the other universities, whose constitutions he studied, did Mr. Carmichael get the idea of a batch election by graduates? I suspect it is altogether the outcome, if I must not use the word ignorance, of Mr. Carmichael's valour.

And this leads to the next point, Mr. Carmichael's antagonism to the principle of retirement by rotation. He points out that on that method years must elapse before all the fellows would have to face their constituency. Even supposing that the gradual process contemplated in Mr. Wade's bill, of which Mr. Carmichael says that I spoke highly, though in point of fact I only said that it contained a provision to this effect—even supposing that so gradual a process was undesirable and that the whole Senate should most fitly retire in the present year of grace, that was no reason why provision for the annual retirement of two fellows in rotation should not have been made from 1914 on. But Mr. Carmichael has another argument against the system of rotation; that just as "evil communications corrupt good manners," the single pair might be influenced by their colleagues already on the Senate. Thus he assumes that the present fellows have a bad influence. Those who are supporting nine of them think differently, but it is unnecessary to go into that just now. What I want to point out is that here we have an odd commentary on his statement that he "expressed no opinion as to the relative merits of the candidates of the respective parties"; "that is purely a matter for the electors." But now we are to understand that a majority of the present fellows, and therefore some of those seeking re-election, are tarred with "Conservatism," which in Mr. Carmichael's sense is a thing to be tabooed. In the same way he talks of the "exclusiveness and ultra-conservatism of myself and those "associated" with me. Mr. Carmichael does not know who any of my associates are, except the other members of the general committee of graduates to which I have the honour to belong, so presumably he is referring to them. This, then, is another good example of his policy of non-interference. In point of fact it is grossly unfair to tax us with exclusiveness or ultra-conservatism. Anyone casting his eyes over the list of names will see that many of us have been for years advocates of a limited tenure on the senate, and increased aid to poor and deserving students, though we may not approve of the particular specifics that Mr. Carmichael has offered.

Then he says of my opinions on finance that this is a field that should apparently have been reserved for the financial members of the senate, of whom I speak in such laudatory terms. Why, that is exactly my own conviction, and that is why I am going to vote for Mr. Knox and Mr. Teece, that it may if possible be reserved for their consideration. But meanwhile the fact remains that, according to the Act, the University will have its maximum revenue at the start, and that this will gradually diminish till it reaches the point at which it has hitherto stood. No array of figures to prove how much the University is getting, or is going to get, can alter this unpleasant truth. Therefore any improvements that involve a permanent increase in the annual expenditure are, to say the least, risky. Mr. Carmichael indeed assures us that there is no need to fear that any Government will curtail the State contribution to the University. But, in the first place, that is not the point. Is there full security that it will increase it to meet the growing deficit? And, second, though of course we all know that Mr. Carmichael's promises are sacred things, still he can only promise for himself. He cannot pledge future Governments or Parliaments. He cannot guarantee us against bad seasons or financial crises, or the retrenchment that may become inevitable.

I do not propose to follow Mr. Carmichael in his excursions to ancient Rome or Egypt. Their taste is not "questionable," and, as surely Mr. Carmichael must know, or perhaps does not know, they are quite irrelevant.

I am, etc., M. W. MACCALLUM.

UNIVERSITY ELECTIONS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—The graduates associated under the name of Progressives have refrained from reflections upon members of the old senate. Difference of opinion concerning University educational methods and government does not imply disrespect for the individuals opposed. It is much to be regretted, therefore, that a professor, whom all graduates honour should have questioned the sense of honour and independence of character of those new candidates for the senate who do not meet with Conservative approval. One hesitates to give greater publicity by quotation to remarks suggestive of sinister influences at work in University management and a want of character in University men who are either young or who are not financially independent. The position taken up by the publisher of the address is on a plane so much beneath what might reasonably have been expected that it gives rise to feelings of keen disappointment. Graduates generally will agree that the term of their studentship was amongst the most inspiring periods of their lives, and that this inspiration came chiefly from the University teachers. Their ideals were so high—their plane of thought and feeling so far above the sordid—that men and women responsive to such influences could not fail to acquire higher and more generous habits of thought. If, however, the views of life and character manifested in the address referred to are to be impressed upon the minds of students one cannot view the consequences with satisfaction. The tone, if it were to become general, would have a pernicious effect upon the minds of men and women whose characters are in process of forming, and the outside public might well question the value of the "humanities" if they produced men who, according to the professor, are of so contemptible a nature that their fellow graduates should not place them in a position of trust in the service of their Alma Mater. The graduate, according to the professor, is a man who, when the conflict of duty and interest arises, cannot be trusted to do the right thing, at any rate, that is the attitude we should assume towards him when he is a candidate for election to the senate.

Even if we were to adopt the professor's line of criticism the fact remains that some of the candidates whom he supports were at the time of their election to the old senate in no better position as to age or financial independence than the younger candidates whom the progressives are supporting. Yet they have proved according to the professor most suitable senators. But this is not the only inconsistency. The candidate whom the professor selects for the most glowing tribute was at the time "he did the right thing and the honest and loyal thing when he had nothing to gain and everything to lose by it," younger in years and less independent financially than the youngest and least affluent of the progressive candidates. He has proved, therefore, that neither youth nor means should be taken as the criterion of character.

Furthermore, the attack in any case loses its point when it is remembered that even judged by the professor's criterion three at least of the new progressive candidates are by their age and status quite outside of such criticism, and the others are of such a character that few would care to offer them the insult of suggesting the possibility of their being influenced by the motives mentioned in the letter.

The position we take up, however, is that we do not accept the professor's estimate of human nature, and, in any case, the candidates whom we are suporting are persons of such known character that the idea of their proving recreant to their trust does not enter into serious consideration. Reference has been made to the position of two of the candidates as public servants. We maintain that the duties of the two positions have no points of contact, and in consequence no points of conflict. The question of independence does not arise. But supposing that it did, we should still base our contention on the higher ground stated above. The argument is an injustice to the individuals. It would, if accepted, be more—it would be an injury to the State. The public service is an important part of national life, and demands for its efficiency high qualifications of ability and character. It would be an unpatriotic thing to place a further obstacle to such men entering the service by saying to them, in effect, no matter what your merits are, just because you are public servants you are debarred from every outside position of honour and trust.

I am, etc., HENRY DAVIS,
Chairman of Committee of Progressives.
April 18.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Will you allow us a last few words to appear on the day of the senate election? In our letter of the 15th ult you permitted us to intimate to graduates that we desired to communicate with every one of them in order to put the position of the nine retiring senators fairly before them. But we could construct no complete list of their number. There are important omissions from our list; these we regret, without feeling that we are to blame. We might have advertised our cause with more letters to the press, but we had determined to avoid faction-fighting and recrimination, the ordinary motives of such letters. We could not forget that the appeal of the University is to the clearest intelligence and most reverential affection of its sons and daughters.

If we have been wrong graduates will tell us so by their voting. We ask only that they will consider these few things. First, there has always been scope for courtesy in University elections. It was never more to be expected than in this one. The Act put retiring senators at a disadvantage—that of competition with one another as well as with all-comers else. A little chivalrous recognition of their peculiar situation by graduates was urgently required for the credit of the University. Our committee was formed in a spontaneous movement to supply that. Not one fact showing that the success of the University is not real, or that the nine retiring senators were not diligent in their duty as senators, or not the right, capable, and independent men to ensure continuance of the success, has been or could be alleged by anyone really acquainted with University affairs. Some theoretic scheme for revolution within the University has been the only answer to our proposal to act courteously.

Again, the financial situation of the University ought to give graduates deep concern. The new Act leaves it to a progressive shrinkage of income. There is more need than ever of the financial soundness of administration for which the late senate has been very highly distinguished. In this connection graduates will think first of the two great financial experts among the nine retiring senators. But the remainder ought to share in the credit. If the new senate is to be without this expert element the chances of embarrassment for the University must be increased. Nor is it a satisfactory answer to say that the Government of some future day will come to the senate's assistance. Financial stringency may afflict the State and the senate at the same time. That is known to have happened in 1893. It appears, therefore, very unwise for graduates to balance a progressive financial shrinkage by disregard of the need for choosing senators who have either a profound knowledge of finance in general or a particular training in University finance, or both together.

Finally, our committee hopes that graduates realise that they have now to decide whether the senate shall contain a strong element of experience in University direction, or be of a greatly speculative cast. They have been clamorously urged to break the old traditions and choose new men to frame a whole new policy. Decision in that sense, by graduates, would, no doubt, lead to some novel and interesting experiments. But the work of the University being so bound up with the interests of the State and the welfare of the learned professions, prudence would seem to dictate a safer course. The new senate will, in any case, contain not less than seven entirely new members.

We trust that, whether or not the University is to suffer violent change by the will of its graduates, they may approve the action of our committee, which has tried, honestly and fairly and politely, to represent a view that seems to it to necessitate voting for the nine retiring senators and some one other candidate.

We are, etc.,
JOHN S. D'ARCY,
W. S. EDWARDS,
E. R. HOLME,
Hon. Secs. of the General Committee of Graduates.

TRADES AND LABOUR.

HAIRDRESSERS' BOARD.

The Hairdressers' Wages Board has, since August last, examined only five witnesses. The men, who are asking to have their wages raised from £2 15s to £3 3s, are beginning to get discontented. They propose bringing the question of delays under the notice of the Minister for Labour and Industry.

SHEET METAL WORKERS.

Rules governing the sheet metal working industry have been adopted by employees at Melbourne and Brisbane, and they will be submitted to the Sydney employees at a special meeting convened for Thursday next. The federation is to be known as the Sheet Metal Working Industrial Union of Australasia. The objects are thus summarised:—

To uphold the rights of combination of labour, and to improve, protect, and foster the best interest of its members.

To promote industrial peace and efficiency by all amicable means, such as conciliation, arbitration, or the establishment of permanent boards.

(a) To prevent strikes or lockouts.

(b) When differences do occur, to obtain their settlement by just and equitable methods.

(c) To open up regular correspondence with kindred societies in all parts of the world on trade matters.

(d) To establish a fund or funds for the carrying out of the foregoing objects, and to foster co-operation where practicable.

(e) Such other objects as the Federal Council may from time to time decide.

(f) To establish branches of the union throughout the Commonwealth, provided, however, that no State shall have more than one branch.

When New South Wales accepts the constitution steps will be taken to secure Commonwealth conditions by means of the Federal Arbitration Court.

POSTAL SORTERS' UNION.

At a special meeting of the Postal Sorters' Union, the result of the ballot which had been taken throughout this State as to the advisability or otherwise of registering as an Australian union, under the Federal Arbitration and Conciliation Act, was announced by the president, Mr. W. F. Henderson. The voting showed an overwhelming majority of fully 9 to 1 for registration.

FERRY EMPLOYEES.

Representatives of the Firemen and Deckhands' Union met the officials of the Sydney Ferries, Ltd., in conference. The union men were informed that the directors had agreed to a reduction in the working fortnight from 128 to 108 hours for the stile hands, wharf hands, passage hands, etc. The officials promised to recommend a continuance of the yearly advance of 2s 6d per week to junior labour. An attempt to have the coaling hands, who are now in receipt of £2 10s per week, paid £2 17s 6d has yet to be finally settled, the officials not being prepared to offer more than £2 15s. It was decided that the new working hours should come in force on Thursday next.

CHAUFFEUR'S LOG.

At a meeting of the Chauffeurs and Taxi-cab Drivers' Union of New South Wales, at the Trades Hall, the following scale of wages and working averages were adopted:—Wages, £3 15s per week, a week to consist of six working days of nine hours each, making a total of 54 hours per week. Overtime to be paid for any time over and above that number of hours in any one week at the usual overtime rates prevailing in other trades and industries. Casual work to be paid for at the rate of 1s 9d per hour.

An amendment was put to the meeting that taxi-cab drivers be paid £2 10s per week of 54 hours and commission on a sliding scale. A division being taken, the amendment was defeated.

Early application is to be made for a board to decide the working conditions. When touring, if mutually agreed upon, the application of the award may be varied, and a mileage basis be accepted instead of the nine hours per day. It will be asked that the award should apply to men in the Government services, with preference to unionists in either private or public work.

FEDERATED STOREMEN.

The secretary of the United Storemen's Union, Mr. T. Miller, is at present in Melbourne on business in connection with the consideration of the Federal log of claims which was tentatively agreed upon at the Brisbane conference in February last. It is proposed to have uniform conditions throughout the Commonwealth, with working hours aggregating 44 and 42 for females; to be worked at times specified. The minimum pay for any storeman or packer is suggested at not less than £3 6s per week. Other storemen or packers, according to the nature of their work, are being put down at £3 6s, £3 10s, £3 12s 6d, £4, and £4 10s per week. Casual hands are being put down as worth 1s 9d per hour. Storemen or packers carrying heavy goods are put down at 3d per hour extra. Overtime is proposed at the rate of time and a half. Preference is asked for unionists, and other claims include regulations in respect to meal hours, holidays, etc.

SOAP AND CANDLE EMPLOYEES.

The variation which was made in the award in the soap and candle industry was discussed by the union on Saturday.

Mr. A. Carter, secretary of the Factory Employees' Union, told a meeting of the employees, held at the Trades Hall, that the Judge in Arbitration had amended the variation in several respects. Overtime on Sundays and holidays, which had been put down at time and a half, had, for instance, been made double time, and a new clause had been inserted dealing with soda boilers. The Judge had now provided that, where only one man was employed soda making, his wages should be £2 15s per week.

Mr. Carter went on to say that he was still dissatisfied with the variation made in the award. He stated that after sitting for nine months examining 80 witnesses, the Judge had altered the whole aspect of the award. Mr. Carter told the men that the board had agreed in camera practically upon all matters, with the exception of wages and preference to unionists, and that the respondents, who (through their representatives) had been a party to this agreement, had appealed against the award, and obtained the Judge's acquiescence, thus bringing about the reduction of wages which the board had granted.

"I would like to know," added Mr. Carter, "in what position board members are placed if their mutual understandings are not to be allowed to remain?"

The meeting did no more than what was done—on the previous Saturday. It merely expressed disapproval of the action of the Judge in making the rates lower than those which the board had regarded as inadequate payment for the work in the industry.

Every tailor, every solicitor, even your own common sense—will tell you that the amount of bad debts made by tailors is enormous.

But you will notice that the tailors don't shut up shop. Now, why's that, do you suppose? It isn't because they have unlimited capital. No fear. The reason is that the tailor MAKES THE GOOD CUSTOMER PAY THOSE BAD DEBTS. He does it by over-charging you for your suit to the extent of a guinea more than the suit is worth.

And yet you are wrong if you blame him. You'd do the same if you were in his place.

Of course, the correct thing to do is to insist on all men paying cash. But that's mighty hard for the tailor who has built up a business on credit-cash lines.

My Business is entirely on Cash, and so I can save you that Guinea.

The ordinary 84/- Suit costs you 63/- at Frank Fanning's.

That's because you don't pay for some "Never-settler's" Suit here. You miss paying collector's and solicitor's charges here—you miss paying traveller's salaries and commissions, shareholder's dividends, warehouseman's profits, etc.

I save you all these because every customer pays me cash and I pay cash for materials—not at the warehouse—but at the Woollen Mills Office.

The sacred blossoms wear.

CANT OF LABOUR FINANCE.

The leader of the Federal Opposition has been attacking the Government on its financial methods, and in doing so he has shown much generalship to concentrating his fire upon the enemy's weakest spot. There is a lot of cant about Labour's financial scheme, if its reckless extravagance can be described as a scheme at all. It boasts that it does not borrow, yet it is each year making the people of the Commonwealth responsible for an ever-increasing burden of loan indebtedness. It prides itself on taking an especial care of the welfare of the worker, yet it is ever-increasing the weight of taxation that he must bear. It glibly talks of the amounts it is expending on defence, but it excludes as far as it is able the incoming of defenders. It asks for commendation for what it is doing towards the development of this vast continent, yet it discriminates against those outside investors, whose capital is essential if that development is to be effected. All this is pure hypocrisy. What it does with one hand it undoes with another. Its professions in no way coincide with its performances. It talks immigration, development, economy, with its tongue in its collective cheek. In it there is no sincerity otherwise than a sincere desire to bulldose electors into giving it a further term of office. It bribes a section of the electors with pensions, with penny postage, with maternity allowances, and it attempts to tax another section to pay for them. Even then its accounts are getting into arrears. Had it not been for the great buoyancy of trade which resulted from the continuance till lately of good times and high prices, it would already have found itself with a huge deficit. As it is, the falling Customs and land tax receipts, coupled with the steady, we may almost say phenomenal, increase in expenditure, can lead to but one result. The accounts cannot long balance, and when we reach the ultimate and inevitable stage, either rigid retrenchment or still more taxation must surely follow.

The current financial year opened with a surplus from the previous year of over two and a quarter millions sterling. The Treasurer in his estimates proposed to spend the whole of this year's revenue, and the surplus as well. He now certainly says that the revenue has been so large that he expects to have the surplus intact at the end of the year, but this is problematical. Its realisation depends upon contingencies over which the Federal Government has no control. If Mr. Fisher perchance finds his prediction verified on June 30, he will be able to tell those pessimistic friends who warned him against the risks that he was running that they were croakers. Sometimes the plunger scores, but on the average he is forced along the path that leads to bankruptcy. Mr. Hughes admits that the Government is spending nearly five and a half millions on defence, and he asks whether the Opposition would cut that amount off if it could. This merely begs the question. The Opposition is as much bound to the defence scheme as is the Government. Federation is largely founded on the necessity for uniformity in defence. Just as well might an extravagant individual urge in extenuation of his wastefulness that he had spent so much on food, and ask, as though the question were unanswerable, whether his creditors would have him do without food. What we should do is to look to the character of the food. If he indulged in caviare when he could afford nothing more expensive than sardines, then even his food accounts would be subject to just criticism. So it is with the Government and its expenditure on defence. Is it getting full value for its money? That is the test that Mr. Cook not unreasonably applies, and we believe that were the subject thoroughly investigated it would be found that there are vast leakages. The whole method of Labour finance has been to get what the party wants and "hang the cost." If its supporters can be benefited, or even made to believe that they are benefited, and their opponents can be charged with the cost, so much the better, but anyhow the expenditure must go on. The maternity allowance scheme of the present Government illustrates its methods. It gets an Act through which is designed to place a burden upon the taxpayer in general for the benefit of the poorer people, who not infrequently find themselves pinched at those times when their families are added to. The cost of this benevolence so far has been at the rate of about £400,000 per annum. Now we are quite in sympathy with those who are doing their duty in increasing the population of this country. Population is our greatest, most pressing need, and there is no reason why assistance should be withheld from those who accept the burden of bringing up children to take their places when they are gone. But how is the Act working in practice? We learn that 95 per cent. of the mothers of the Commonwealth are applying for the allowance. We do not believe that one-fourth of that number really needs the bonus.

This is the Government that does not borrow. The Attorney-General in a pamphlet recently distributed in England emphasises this fact. Yet the Federal Government has taken over the Cockatoo Island works from the State Government, which were constructed by the State out of borrowed money, and, instead of paying for them in hard cash, which, of course, it would have had to borrow, as it had not the money of its own, it took over the property under the transferred property account, and has entered into an obligation to pay interest thereon at a lower rate than the State has to pay for the original loan. These works are worth something over a million sterling, which still appears as part of the State indebtedness, while it does not appear as Commonwealth indebtedness, though the Commonwealth has got the asset. The real position would have been disclosed if the State had been paid for the works, and had redeemed a million pounds' worth of its loans with the resultant money, while the Commonwealth Government had incurred loan responsibilities to the like amount. But no matter how the transaction is wrapped up the effect is the same. The Commonwealth has borrowed the money for which it has agreed to pay the annual interest charge. This is quite in keeping with the methods of the Federal Treasurer. He borrows nothing directly, but by a side-wind he is rapidly piling up a burden of debt upon the taxpayers of the Commonwealth. Such is the cant of Federal finance under Labour rule.

INTER-IMPERIAL TRADE.

One of the most important of the tasks which the Dominions Royal Commission was appointed to undertake was the consideration of possible methods of promoting inter-Imperial trade. Nothing is more calculated to bind the Empire together in an irrevocable union than the powerful cement of reciprocal trade. It brings the different parts of the Empire into continuous relationship; and if the various partners in the firm of John Bull and Co. resolve that so far as possible they will purchase the articles that they need from the other members of the firm, the famous company of nations which comprises the British Empire should rest upon a foundation which no factor in the world's affairs at present in sight can possibly disturb. Already we buy from the United Kingdom a very considerable proportion of the articles that we need and cannot produce ourselves. On the other hand, a very large percentage of our products find their way to British markets. Still there is a margin of trade which is done with foreign countries, both in Australia and Great Britain, which could be diverted to parts of the Empire, and this is especially true of the purchases made by Australia. It is to be regretted that the President of the Chamber of Commerce, when the question was put to him by one of the Commissioners last week, was unable to suggest any means by which the present lacunae in inter-Imperial trade could be filled. We hope that it may still be possible for the representative bodies of the business community to supply authoritative evidence on this subject. Individual traders hold strong views on the matter, and it should not be difficult to focus them, and communicate them to the Commission. Mr. Johnson, the Chief Commissioner for Railways, gave an instance last week of the neglect by British manufacturers of the Australian market. He stated that, although he required ten thousand tons of steel rails each year, he had great difficulty in obtaining tenders at all from British firms, and when, after almost begging for the acceptance of his orders, he induced them to accept a contract, delivery was slow and uncertain. One result of this state of affairs was that orders had to be placed in the United States and Germany.

Three explanations have been given of this condition of things. The steel manufacturers of the world are said to be in league, and to have apportioned the various markets amongst themselves. If this be true, it would be very strange if British manufacturers had left Australia for exploitation by American firms. Secondly, Mr. Lorimer informed Mr. Johnson that his own company, which had come within the scope of the Chief Commissioner's condemnation, manufactured steel rails only when shipbuilding was slack. But probably the most plausible explanation is that put forward by Mr. Garnett, that, as a result of the remarkable increase of trade on all sides, British manufacturers are so busy with orders in the old country that they are unable to deal with customers overseas. But there is another aspect to the question to which Mr. Johnson referred, namely, the desirability of looking to the future and of making definite preparations for supplying the important and rapidly-growing market in the various Dominions. It is true that the establishment of the steel works at Newcastle and other undertakings will in the future considerably diminish the field which British manufacturers can cover in the Commonwealth. But the output of these works, and any additional works that may be established in the next few years, will necessarily be limited in both quality and quantity, even if all the present anticipations are realised. Our demands are increasing year by year, and it is impossible that they should be met locally for a very considerable period.

IMAGINATION IN POLITICS.

In his speech at the supper given in his honour by the Institute of Journalists on Saturday evening, Sir Rider Haggard made a striking appeal for the introduction into our politics of more of that inspired quality of imagination, without which our public men can never hope to be more than politicians, can never become in the true sense of the term, statesmen. Never were words more in season uttered. Australia stands to-day at the parting of the ways; and the question before her citizens both in State and Commonwealth is whether they will adopt a policy which will lead to that ideal of material prosperity and moral elevation of her people, for which the great men of the past hoped and wrought, or one that means stagnation in the present and decay or destruction in the near future. To aid her to shape her policy aright Australia needs statesmen for her leaders; men who can and will look forward into the future, men who can rise above the petty trivialities that fill too largely the foreground of the politics of the day, who can conceive and express a national ideal, and who can consciously frame their policy with a view to the speedy realisation of that ideal. The politicians of to-day fall far short of that standard. Opportunism is the central doctrine of their creed; and the petty issue of the passing hour is their chief concern. They frame their policies, not with the view of the consummation of high national ideal, but to catch the popular fancy of the moment, win votes, and gain a victory for their particular party. And so they take the easier course of appealing to the lower and paltry passions of the people, instead of educating public opinion to a statesmanlike conception of national development. The latter is a difficult task, and the man who is to grapple successfully with it must have that imagination of which Sir Rider Haggard spoke, the same imagination which Bacon said must be joined with the belief of that which is to come, and the memory of that which is past.

The memory of the past the statesman needs, that he may teach the people to avoid the errors that experience has shown to be fraught with evil to those nations that have fallen into them, and to confute the false prophets whose doctrine is but the old errors dressed up in new guise. The belief of that which is to come he needs, for without faith in the high destiny of his country his will lack that strong emotional impulse by means of which alone he can face and endure the fight that lies before him. But when such a man arises he will find a people who will welcome and follow him, for he will have the mightiest lever known to the moral world—imagination. Sir Rider Haggard suggested the special application of this quality for which he appealed to one political question of the day—the question of the population of the Commonwealth. The ideal of a strong and powerful nation, that will in the future dominate the destinies of the Southern Pacific, calls for the effective occupation of the whole continent, and that speedily. A paltry five millions confined almost wholly to the eastern and southern seaboard, cannot realise that ideal; nay, more, it cannot even guarantee to hold the country against the land-hungry peoples of Asia and of Europe. Without effective occupation we have not, according to the accepted principles of international law, the right to exclusive possession. Without effective occupation we have not, according to the teachings of history and common sense, the power to exclude others. It does not, therefore, need much imagination to recognise that the greatness, nay, even the very existence, of Australia requires the population and settlement of every portion of the continent. And those political leaders who, knowing this, yet from subservience to the ignorant and short-sighted selfishness of a section of the people, or other opportunist considerations, are hostile or indifferent to this instant demand, are guilty of sinning against the light—which is the greater condemnation.

THE BARRIER STRIKE.

It is satisfactory to learn that after being reduced to a state of utter stagnation by certain of its militant unionists Broken Hill will once again be able to resume its normal activities. The terms of settlement show that as far as this strike is concerned the strikers must admit defeat. The whole thing originated in a crusade against non-unionism, which proceeded unchecked until its triumphant career was stayed by seven clerks in the employ of the Silverton Tramway Company. These men occupied positions of some responsibility, and as they refused to join a union the company refused to interfere in what, after all, was their own private business. Not so the unionists. Rather than that seven men should stay outside the fold they struck, a course which, as they controlled the sole means of communication with the rest of the world, speedily reduced the whole of the Barrier to inactivity, and came, it is said, within measurable distance of reducing it to famine. Since then there have been various excursions and alarms. The strikers called upon the Government of New South Wales to seize the line, and threatened, if the Government refused, to seize it themselves, regardless of the fact that in each case this would have been a frank and cynical defiance of the law. At one time it appeared as if the Barrier might become a scene of violence and rioting. However, the company stuck to its guns, wiser counsels prevailed, and at last a belated but none the less certain peace has been declared. The strikers have given up their claim that the seven men should become unionists, which nominally was the whole question at issue. The company promises to let bygones be bygones. There is the usual non-victimisation clause, and the company promises for the future to confine the non-unionists in its employ to the persons of these seven.

Of course, it must be extremely gratifying to all concerned that the strike has been settled, and settled without intervention by the Government, and without the prejudging of matters already sub judice, as was done in the last three big strikes. It certainly seems a drastic step to throw the whole of the Barrier idle simply because seven men refused to ally themselves to what is nowadays a semi-political association. But in this case the seven men were only the stalking-horse by which the unions sought to capture greater game. They desired to establish as a principle not merely preference to unionists, but the absolute exclusion of non-unionists. As far as the seven individuals in question are concerned they have had to give way; but to the extent that the company may have for the future only to employ unionists they have been successful. In other words, they have taken the law into their own hands, and will have secured what no Court would have granted them. "Preference to unionists" is often incorporated by consent into an agreement; it is sometimes given in an award where the employer is thought by the Court to be hostile to unionism. But the absolute exclusion of non-unionists is a very different proposition, and is one which the most confident union would hardly present for the serious consideration of an Arbitration Court. The Silverton Tramway Company, no doubt, knows what best suits its own interests, and as long as its present employees are not victimised it may have no objection to confining itself to the employment of unionists for the future. However, in other parts of the State such a thing may be neither advisable nor possible, and unionists can hardly expect that what seems assured in this case shall be regarded everywhere as a matter of principle. A time may come when everyone is a member of a union, but until then it would be most flagrantly unjust to deny a man the right to work simply because he was unwilling to join a body with whose methods and objects he might not sympathise.

Immigration Arrangements.—The reported immigration agreement between Mr. Holman and Mr. Watt, which it is stated has been accepted by the Victorian Government, has not yet been before the New South Wales Cabinet. It is understood that the proposed arrangement would make for economy in management without in any way impairing the efficiency of the service, but no details have come to hand, and until they are received nothing can be done.

Gift to City Council Workmen.—The Labour aldermen and the several others whose votes generally go with them are making a most determined assault upon the City Council's treasury. They want to distribute among the council's workmen gratuities amounting in the aggregate to no less a sum than £8000. This generosity is to be accorded, if the effort succeeds, by making the recent award of the wages board, which was, as a concession, made retrospective from January 1, date back to June 18 of last year. Alderman English, who is the prime mover in the matter, asserts that when he brought a motion before the council last June for increasing the workmen's wages he was given a promise by the then Lord Mayor (Alderman Clarke) that the wages board award would operate as from that date. In reply, other aldermen contend that the verbal promise of a Lord Mayor, if made, cannot bind the whole council; and, furthermore, the city solicitor has already advised that the proposed payment would be illegal. Nevertheless, Alderman English has given notice of a motion for to-morrow night's meeting of the council,—"That the finance committee consider and report on the advisability of providing a sum of money not exceeding £8000 for payment of a gratuity equal to the increase of wages approved by the recent wages board decision as from June 18, 1912, and as to the power of the council to pay such gratuity."

Does Shakespeare Pay?—So anxious were many people to witness the initial performance of the Asche-Brayton combination at the Theatre Royal on Saturday that at 7 o'clock in the morning women were waiting at the theatre door. After these enthusiasts had consumed their sandwiches, Miss Brayton was thoughtful enough to order tea for them at 3 o'clock. When the gallery doors were opened at 4 o'clock there was an immediate rush, and shortly afterwards that portion of the house was crowded. Every part of the theatre was packed when the performance began.

Mortality in the Metropolis.—Typhoid fever and whooping cough were more prevalent in the metropolitan area last month than usual. The report of Dr. Armstrong states that 651 deaths of residents of the metropolis were recorded for March, which was equal to an annual mortality rate of 11.07 per 1000 of the estimated population. Infectious diseases caused 41 deaths, whooping cough was responsible for 20 deaths. Diphtheria caused 11 deaths, diarrhoeal diseases 81, phthisis 44, respiratory diseases 42, cancer 70, and Bright's disease 26. Among children under one year of age 148 deaths were registered, which corresponded to an infantile mortality rate of 83 per 1000 births. Thirty attacks of scarlet fever, 194 of diphtheria, and 182 of typhoid fever were notified during March.

H.M.S. NEW ZEALAND.

CAPTAIN AND OFFICERS ENTERTAINED.

WELLINGTON (N.Z.), Sunday.

Captain Halsey and the officers of H.M.S. New Zealand were entertained by the Government at luncheon last week.

The Prime Minister (Mr. Massey) in the course of his speech said that it might suit some parts of the Empire to build and own their own ships, but when war came every ship should be a British ship, under Imperial control.

He added that he doubted whether Britain had a sufficient number of battleships in the Pacific.

Captain Halsey said that he had passed through South Africa and Australia, which countries, he judged, looked upon the gift of a battleship as a very great thing. Other countries looked upon it as a great emblem of the peace of the world. If occasion arose his ship would have to go where required. In New Zealand it would be no good. The vessel would have to go where it would be most useful in time of danger.

STOCK PROBLEMS.

MEAT BOARD AT TENTERFIELD.

TENTERFIELD, Saturday.

The meat industry and abattoirs board sat this morning. Mr. Lee, M.L.A., and a dozen others giving evidence. Mr. Lee suggested the running of stock trains. Preference should be over all but mail trains. In cases where there were insufficient trucks to form a train, he suggested that they should run pick-up trains. This was endorsed by all the auctioneers, who related their experience of a week ago, when the trucks did not arrive in time, necessitating the cattle standing wet in the yards all day and night.

At the conclusion of the sitting, the chairman thanked the Mayor (Alderman Mitchell) for arranging for witnesses to give definite evidence and suggestions.

"ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA."

GLORIOUSLY-STAGED TRAGEDY.

A QUEENLY CLEOPATRA.

All the vast resources of the scenic art of the day have been loosed upon the colossal images and imperial splendours of Shakespeare's tragedy in this great revival of "Antony and Cleopatra." Oscar Asche staged the play in this manner at the Theatre Royal on Saturday night. It was a great production of well-ordered magnificence, for which the actor-manager's name will long be held in grateful memory. Such was its fitness that it did not sink or overwhelm the verse. The voices of good actors rose and fell in mellow periods to this gorgeous illustration of the text, and never without significance. One part there was that was greatly interpreted. Indeed, Lily Brayton's Cleopatra should live in stage-history. This artist shows neither the voluptuous syren nor the vicious profligate, but the noble queen who "had immortal longings in her." All the tragedy of the character, which quickly becomes its predominating element, leans to such an impersonation. On such lines, whilst always picturesquely in keeping, the star of this new Cleopatra burns with increasing brightness towards the end, and shows all the effulgence of its glory in the last act. Here the rhapsodical language of grief was so touchingly delivered that its poetry sounded like nature. The music of the artist's voice gave largeness and stateliness to the pathos of every utterance, in which there was no forced note or stilted effort. So true and deep was the impression made by the actress in this lament chanted over a world in ruin that, when the ultimate curtain fell, the audience had to rouse itself with resolution to the applause of the recalls. Enthusiasm had run high throughout the evening. The scenery had amazed, the music had charmed, the imperial greatness of the swelling theme had awed; but in the end it was this fine piece of acting that touched the general heart and brought tears to many eyes.

Some fine modern music, especially composed for the revival by Christopher Wilson, provides a virile, warlike, and original march, which typifies Mark Antony and the power of Rome, a tender theme for violins suggestive of the love that bound the splendid pair, and a loftily inspired funeral march. The first two themes were heard in the prelude, near the close of which a gauze transparency revealed the shadowy colossi of the desert, which, melting before the eye, were replaced by the reality of Cleopatra's house in Alexandria. A high standard of scenic art has been the rule in Australia for long years past, and, in addition to the work of highly qualified resident painters, the style of a long line of English celebrities, including Hawes Craven, W. Teebin, and Joseph Harker, has become familiar. It is the lastnamed who, in this opening scene, occupies the entire stage with ascending flights of broad marble steps, the middle pause in which is at the footlights, from beneath which rise the figures of Philo and Demetrius as they take up duty in all the panoply of scarlet uniform and golden armour. High above, the staircase terminates at classic columns, with a glimpse of the purple, tropical sky beyond. It is here that, to a renewed burst of music, Cleopatra and Antony enter upon a litter, borne by Nubian slaves, preceded by a train of incense-bearers, Egyptian officials, dancing-girls in wasplike black and yellow, linked together by chains of crimson roses, eunuchs, priests, and guards. All these stain with gorgeous tints the pure white radiance of the marble stairs, forming a marvellous picture. These stately surroundings harmonise with the swollen metaphors of the verse, and Antony's declamatory "Let Rome in Tiber melt! And the wide arch of the rang'd empire fall!" seem picturesquely in place. As the palanquin descends to the unseen depths, the Egyptian enchantress stands to acknowledge with an ineffable smile of dazzling sweetness the plaudits of the crowd. Miss Brayton looks beautiful in pink silks of variously-hued roses, jewels, and strange gems everywhere, red hair and a fair white skin. Cleopatra was of partly Greek descent; yet it is impossible to suppose her other than a brunette. The mind receives another memorable impression at the end of the act, when Antony's soldiers throng the marble way, and with shouts of triumph lead forth their high-battled captain to the war.

A complete change of atmosphere shows the classic severity of Caesar's house in Rome, with the dramatic situation, acted with convincing spirit by all, in which Lepidus (Mr. J. Fritz Russell) reconciles Antony with the offended Octavius Caesar. Something may here be said of Mr. Asche's Antony. This scene furnishes one of many passages in which the actor finely fills the part. He shows us stern dignity and fire of the fighting captain, who can yet comport himself with the restraint needed for policy. Before this, on the death of Fulvia, "There's a great spirit gone," touched the right stop with a sure hand; so also in his dejection after defeat and reproach, "O whither hast thou led me, Egypt?" was movingly spoken. Antony has points of contact with another choleric soldier, Othello. Mr. Asche showed this in the rageful scene of jealousy in which, after ordering out Thyreus to be whipped, the triumvir seizes Cleopatra by the throat with the contemptuous words, "I found you as a morsel cold upon dead Caesar's plate!" In this intemperate wrath, and in a scene so far removed from it as the last of all, "I am dying, Egypt, dying," the artist fully met the exigencies of the occasion. Generally, there was a lack of that romance with which the figure of Antony is made to glow in the pages of Shakespeare. Yet the actor indicated that strain of the heroic debased by weakness, and enervated by sensuality, though it was, which brought Mark Antony to a Roman soldier's death with fortitude.

In briefly considering Miss Brayton's "Cleopatra" in its entirety, we are reminded of Mrs. Siddons' reasons for declining the part, "That she should hate herself if she were to play it as she thought it should be played." Had Mrs. Siddons studied the character her difficulty would have been removed, for the poet has so filled the mind of Cleopatra with high thoughts towards the end that it is impossible to regard her as a mere wanton. Miss Brayton, handsome in many sumptuous changes of raiment, missed the volatile charm, the airy fascination, which properly belongs to a courtesan who is also a wit. But the text gives no prominence to that essentially feminine trait. It may be that the dark shadow of tragedy too early eclipses the brightness of Cleopatra's rich contralto tones, as when she arraigns her lover like Justice itself in the scornful "What says the married woman?" This could be treated more lightly. For all that, there is nothing monotonous in the impersonation. The variety of mood in the scene with the messenger, upon whom the termagant falls like a fury; the joyous little laugh in the picture of herself as a fisher of men, and the ready sympathy with Charmian and Iras, are contrasted with loftier phases. The enthusiasm of "Upon your sword sit laurel'd victory!" and many other fine speeches, such as the one to Dolabella, led the actress from strength to strength, until she reached the point at which Cleopatra declared "My desolation does begin to make a better life." An easier or more thrilling declamation of splendid lines from here to the end, and before that over the body of Antony, playgoers are not likely to hear in a lifetime. It formed the embodiment of a passionate sorrow so long continued that only an artist of the highest vocal endowments could sustain it without losing the vital inspiration that bore it up.

This last act, "In the Monument," built on the roof of an Alexandrian palace, with the trapdoor by which the characters enter and descend, presents another novel aspect of scenic changes that are full of surprise. Foremost is the one showing a banqueting hall of black marble. The blue sky is shown beyond great shafts of darkly rising pillars, with a floor of polished marble, ingeniously suggested by the use of black velvet. Here the dancing of an Egyptian cymbal ballet, with Zara's fantastic pas seul, presented one of the great spectacular effects of the production.

Playgoers will admire Mr Frederick Worlock's "Caesar" for its pictured realisation of such a character, the dark, intellectual countenance sparkling beneath the traditional fillet of golden laurel leaves; and he delivered with heartfelt bitterness the denunciation of Antony for the desertion of Octavia. This tragedy within a tragedy owed something to the dignified meekness of Miss Olive Noble. Mr. Herbert Grimwood played with declamatory exuberance, and an air of swaggering, soldierly gaiety, the part of Enobarbus. He "rallied" Antony on the death of Fulvia with heartless camaraderie, and showed fine judgment in his recitation of "The barge she sat in, like a burnished throne." 'Tis a mighty long speech, and the audience followed it with almost breathless interest. This clever actor's art is too highly imbued with individuality, and will always cause differences of opinion. Mr. Caleb Porter's weird solemnity as the Soothsayer; Mr. Ian Penny's fine appearance as Alexas; Mr. R. F. Anson's dense, yet loquacious, rusticity as the clown with the figs and the asp; Miss M. Orton-Druig's ready brightness as Charmian, with Miss Lily Birtles as Iras; and Mr. Neville Brooke's Eros, Mr. H. R. Highnett's Agrippa, Mr. Alexander Onslow's Dolabella, all deserve mention. Mr. F. Wynne Jones conducted the new music, and Mr. J. Fritz Russell directed the stage.

J. C. Williamson, Ltd., notify that there will not be any matinees during the run of this tragedy.

THE REFERENDUM.

CAMPAIGN NOTES.

"I am an unswerving adherent to the doctrine of what is sometimes described as State rights," said Mr. Holman. Liberals and the electors should follow Mr. Holman's lead in this matter.

* * * * *

"I still believe," continued the Premier, "that the State House of New South Wales, so far as the people of New South Wales are concerned, is the instrument by which the liberties, the rights, and the happiness of this State are to be secured."

* * * * *

"No man can consider the conditions under which the battle of social reform has to be fought without realising that State Parliaments are infinitely more valuable and effective weapons than is the Federal Parliament."

* * * * *

"The representation of the Senate is ridiculous. A Tasmanian counts for as many as nine citizens of New South Wales."

* * * * *

"In any division a New South Wales or Victorian representative who speaks for two-thirds of the people of Australia can be outvoted by two to one by the other Senators who speak for the remaining one-third."

* * * * *

"It is a state of things which is both an anomaly and a grievance, utterly undemocratic, utterly indefensible; and things which have been condemned again and again by every member of the party in New South Wales."

* * * * *

Mr. Justice Higgins is generally reputed to be not unsympathetic to the political aspirations of the Labour movement. In the well-known Huddart, Parker case the power now sought by the alteration of the Constitution dealing with corporations was advocated as already being law.

* * * * *

"If the argument for the Crown is right," said the learned Judge, "the results are certainly extraordinarily big with confusion."

* * * * *

"If it is right the Federal Parliament may enact that no foreign, no trading or financial corporation shall pay its employees less than ten shillings per day, or charge more than [illegible] per cent. interest, whereas other corporations and persons would be free from such restrictions."

* * * * *

"If it is right, the Federal Parliament can enact that no officer of a corporation shall be an atheist or a Baptist, or that all must be teetotallers."

* * * * *

"If the respondent's argument is right the Federal Parliament can license a lighthouse for the sale of beer and spirits, or may establish schools in lighthouses with distinctive or doctrinal teaching; although the licensing laws and educational laws, for ordinary purposes, are left to the State Legislatures."

* * * * *

The fourth proposed amendment brings industrial disputes on the railways within the purview of the Federal Arbitration Court. This is an indirect method of interfering in the control of the State railways.

* * * * *

This is what Mr. M'Gowen had to say as to the effect on wages:—"With the six States remaining as now, where one State had better wages than others, there was a spirit of friendly emulation amongst teh other five."

* * * * *

"But where they had only the centralised authority, a kind of medium would be struck, and there would be in reality a levelling down for some of the States."

* * * * *

Are the railway and tramway employees of this State willing to take the risk of this happening? If not you must vote "No."

NATIONAL SERVICE.

LORD ROBERTS'S CAMPAIGN.

ENTHUSIASM AT LEEDS.

LONDON, April 19.

Lord Roberts was accorded an extraordinary reception at Leeds yesterday.

Three thousand persons attended the meeting he addressed in the Town Hall, and 30,000 people gathered in Victoria-square, where the main points of his speech were cinematographed on a huge screen.

Lord Roberts in moving a resolution in favour of national service, said that his reception was a sign of a great revolution in public opinion, as seven months earlier it seemed beyond human power to rouse the country from its torpor. Politicians and the Cabinet, he declared, were mostly blind. In Swiss history the word "conscription" was a badge of honour.

Lord Roberts compared his proposed citizen army with the Continental system, and declared that it was unfair and unpatriotic to describe national service as slavery or a "blood tax." The army, he suggested, would be exclusively for home defence, and would never be required to deal with strikers.

Sir Arthur Lawley, ex-Governor of Western Australia and of Madras, seconded the motion. He said that when Canada, New Zealand, and Australia had sought to strengthen their naval and military forces, it had not been done in a spirit of militarism or aggrandisement, but in order that when England's voice was raised in the councils of the nations they might be enabled to insist on peace.

"NO NECESSITY."

ACTION OF DOMINIONS.

LONDON, April 19.

Mr. C. E. H. Hobhouse, Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, in a speech at Bristol last night, denied that there was any necessity for the adoption of compulsory service.

"We have no commitments of any sort with Continental nations," he pointed out, and he added, "The action of the Dominions has enormously reduced the possibility of a call upon the motherland."

THE TERRITORIALS.

LONDON, April 19.

Lord Esher has resigned the position of Chairman of the London Branch of the Territorial Association, and Field-Marshal Sir William Nicholson succeeds him.

The branch has agreed to a resolution in favour of the adoption of some system that will lead to an increase in the numbers of Territorials.

THE SUFFRAGISTS.

SCENE AT THE MONUMENT.

"DEATH OR VICTORY."

LONDON, April 18.

Two women's suffragists hoisted flags on The Monument bearing the words "Death or Victory," and after scattering leaflets, bolted the door on the arrival of the police.

The constables, however, after an hour's delay, broke down the door and arrested the two women.

Many police were required to protect them from a huge and threatening crowd, which had gathered shouting "Duck them in the Thames."

The women were taken to the police station for shelter and were eventually released.

Mr. G. Lansbury and Mrs. Drummond were remanded at the police court to-day on a charge of inciting the public to violence in their recent speeches.

Some youths have confessed to being the perpetrators of the recent attempt to blow up the ruins of Dudley Castle, an outrage which was attributed to women's suffragists.

Several witnesses have identified two women's suffragists in Holloway Prison as the perpetrators of the Englefield Green outrage.

A canister of gunpowder, surrounded by an inflammable material and burning candles, was found in the Aberdeen Railway Station. It is supposed to be the work of women's suffragists.

A bomb containing half a pound of gunpowder, was found on the steps of Smeaton Tower, Plymouth, last night. The wick had been lit, but had apparently been blown out by the wind. The bomb bore the inscription: "Votes for Women—death in 10 minutes."

RESULT OF INQUIRY.

PARIS, April 18.

The "Matin" states that the inquiry which has been conducted by M. Ogier, a member of the Council of State, into the alleged violent treatment of a party of Germans at Nancy shows that the travellers were not struck but they were insulted.

The paper states that it is the intention of the Government to punish the officials for not protecting the Germans, and also to prohibit the production of offensive plays in frontier towns.

Later information states that the Government has dismissed the two policemen who were on duty at the Nancy Station at the time of the incident, and is reorganising the whole of the Nancy police force. The Prefect has been transferred to another district for neglecting to report the incident.

The German Ambassador has been notified of the dismissals.

GERMAN VERSION.

BERLIN, April 18.

The Germans deny that they provoked the incident at Nancy.

They say that the crowd hustled them into the train. They were kicked and spat upon, and nobody interfered until the station master cleared the carriage, remarking, "Now you have had enough fun."

MILLIONAIRE'S WILL.

THE LATE MR. MORGAN'S ESTATE.

NEW YORK, April 20.

The will of the late Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan does not state the amount of the deceased financier's property.

Testator's son, Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan, junior, is left the residue of the estate less a sum of 20,000,000 dollars (£4,000,000) bequeathed for various family and charitable purposes. The famous collection of works of art is left to testator's son with the injunction to make a permanent disposition of it, if he so wishes, in such a fashion as will best give instruction and pleasure to the American people.

Testator's wife is bequeathed the income from a trust fund of 5,000,000 dollars (£1,000,000), and power is given to dispose of the capital at her death. She is also given the New York residence, 219 Madison-avenue, and the country residence.

The sum of 3,000,000 dollars (£600,000) is left outright to testator's son, and other large sums to his sons-in-law and married daughters.

The will opens with a striking confession of religious faith in the sufficiency of Christ's atonement.

TOKIO, April 19.

A great public meeting was held last night to consider the Californian Alien Lands Bill. There were 20,000 people present, and many fiery orations were delivered.

M. Matsumura, a member of the Diet, urged the despatch of the fleet to California, and other speakers urged that the questions at issue between Japan and the United States should be settled once and for all, otherwise they would recur and lead to war.

If the Californian bill is passed Japan will apply to the United States Federal Government for permission for Japanese subjects to become naturalised.

WASHINGTON, April 20.

Mr. W. J. Bryan, Secretary of State, telegraphed to the Governor of California, asking him to withhold his signature from the Alien Lands Bill, on the ground that the measure violated the existing treaty between Japan and the United States.

Mr. Bryan is in favour of the Federal Senate Bill, limiting the ownership of land to citizens of the United States or those likely to become citizens, on the ground that such a measure would be the least likely to cause friction.

The Californian Houses received the notification of Mr. Bryan's letter without comment.

REMUNERATIVE PATRIOTISM.

MORE GERMAN CHARGES.

BERLIN, April 19.

In the Reichstag last night Dr. Liebknecht (Socialist) stated that the Krupp firm and the manufacturers of Mauser rifles resorted to illicit methods in inducing the leading organs of the French press to create an anti-German sentiment with the object of facilitating an increase in German armaments.

He also accused Krupps of secretly corrupting army officers and officials of the Prussian War Office with a view to securing early information in regard to contracts and an insight into the offers of competing firms. He asserted that several prominent officials had been arrested.

The Minister for War stated that Dr. Liebknecht had been guilty of grave exaggeration. He admitted, however, that the matter was being investigated, and said that one of Krupps' officials had bribed sergeants and others to disclose information; but it was not certain that the directors of the firm were involved. He begged the House to reserve judgment in regard to the matter.

SERIOUS POSSIBILITIES.

THE MINMI AGREEMENT.

At the invitation of Mr. Peter Bowling, a secret meeting of representative unionists was held in Sydney on Saturday night.

As a result of this it is understood that two ultimatums will be issued to the colliery proprietors to-day.

What is actually aimed at cannot be authentically stated, but it is rumoured that the Minmi coal may be declared "black," and that some action may be taken in respect to the steam colliers which usually trade between Sydney and the South Coast, and which are now carrying coals from Newcastle.

The threatened action in respect to Minmi coal is intended to counteract the carrying out of the five years' agreement which the miners entered into with Messrs. J. and A. Brown contrary to the wishes of the Colliery Employees' Federation.

Mr. Peter Bowling stated last night that a meeting had taken place on Saturday night near the Trades Hall. It was attended by Mr. Peters, acting president of the Colliers' Federation of the Northern District; Mr. Lewis, the treasurer; Mr. M'Cormack, representing the Newcastle Coal Trimmers; Mr. A. C. Willis, president of the Illawarra Colliery Employees' Federation; Mr. Bird, treasurer; and himself, as secretary. The president of the Coal Lumpers' Union, Mr. Findlay, was present, but left before any business was transacted.

"There can be no mistaking the seriousness of the position," Mr. Bowling said. "Viewing things all round, I cannot help feeling that the trouble looks like spreading. I don't want it to spread, but I do not see what is to prevent it. Things cannot stop as they are. I know what the feeling in the north is, and our delegate, who has just returned from the western collieries, states that the miners there are also inclined to cease work, and the whole tendency of the trouble spreading is now more pronounced than before I left for Brisbane.

"The men want only the principle applied to them which is the right of all other unionists—namely, the right of a fair trial before being dismissed. Mr. Willis is now on his way to Melbourne to place the position before the delegates at the eight-hours demonstration, and to make an appeal for funds for the support of the wives and families of the miners. What we are fighting for in the south is not a question which affects the southern men only, and it is felt by other unionists almost cowardly that they should allow the southern men to fight this question by themselves. Anything might happen within the next few days."

"Is it true that the Minmi coal has been declared 'black'?"

"I don't say that it has. I do not say that it won't. This will depend upon the delegate board meeting, which takes place at Newcastle on Monday. I understand that the period of time given the Minmi miners to throw aside their sectional agreement is now just about up. Something must happen. Developments must come fast, like a ball rolling down a hill."

"Was the subject of loading steam colliers discussed?"

"Yes; we certainly have this matter under review. There was a general consensus of opinion that it was wrong for union men to continue loading at Newcastle that class of steamers which are known to be Southern coal traders."

Mr. Bowling added that he was disgusted with the tactics resorted to by those responsible for convening the aggregate meeting in the south behind the backs of the executive officers. The men would not return to work, he said, until such time as they could have their grievances redressed.

"EXTREMELY SERIOUS."

EXECUTIVE OFFICERS IN SYDNEY.

POSITION AT MINMI.

NEWCASTLE, Sunday.

When it became known that Messrs. E. Peters and A. Lewis, of the Colliery Employees' Federation, would proceed to Sydney on Saturday, to confer with representatives of the southern miners, and representatives of the coal-lumpers, the position was at once regarded as extremely serious. There were but few connected with the mining that did not at once suspect the result would be a general stoppage.

The month allowed to the Minmi miners having expired to-day, and the delegate board meeting taking place to-morrow, pointed to the fact that the conference would deal with the Minmi agreement as well as the general situation. The southern miners, who complained about the collieries which previously traded to the south being engaged in the Newcastle trade, were also expected to bring another complaint to that effect before the conference.

The conference having decided to declare all Minmi coal on their "black" list, means that the coal-lumpers in all parts of the Commonwealth will be requested not to handle that coal. But the proprietors of the Minmi collieries can overcome the plans for preventing Minmi coal from being sold. When the Minmi agreement was formed by Messrs. J. and A. Brown they either had, or have since, obtained an agreement with a section of the coal-trimmers to trim the coal under all conditions, and not to strike at any time. The coal-trimmers who signed that agreement are known as the "Co-operative," and it is strongly believed that they will keep to their agreement with Messrs. J. and A. Brown. The other coal-trimmers belonging to the union will no doubt refuse to handle Minmi coal.

When the Minmi coal comes down from the two pits over the railway line of Messrs. J. and A. Brown's, and to the Dyke, it will be loaded into the vessels by the Government employees at the cranes, and trimmed by the "co-operative" trimmers. If it is for export to any part of the Commonwealth it will not be unloaded by the coal-lumpers when it arrives at its destination. There is one way for the Minmi proprietors out of that difficulty which appears impossible for the Federation to crush. Minmi coal is good coal for exporting, and the proprietors will probably send all of it to the foreign markets, and leave the interstate markets alone.

Even if Minmi coal were exported with other coal to Commonwealth ports, there would be another difficulty to overcome. It often happens that three or four kinds of coal are sent in one vessel from this port to other markets. If Minmi coal is loaded with coal from other collieries into the one steamer, the coal lumpers at the port to which the coal has been consigned will be unable to distinguish Minmi coal from the other coal.

WHAT THE MINMI AGREEMENT IS.

The colliery proprietors of the northern district have been in search of peace in the industry. In 1911 there were about 40 stoppages. At the beginning of 1912 they agreed to the formation of the joint conciliation committee as they believed it would prevent stoppages. The constitution stated that the committee should not sit while there were strikes at any of the pits. The miners passed resolutions that there would be no stoppages, while the committee was in existence, but those promises have often been broken. Instead of there being a less number of strikes last year there was an increase to 67. The first few months of this year have seen over 30 stoppages.

With reports coming from the Agent-General for New South Wales showing that this State is losing her coal trade in the East, owing principally to strikes, and with a report from Mr. Nielsen on the damaging effect the opening of the Panama Canal may have on our coal trade, one colliery proprietor at least began to look for a means of preventing strikes. He formed an agreement with his men assuring them increases in the hewing rate for coal and more work if they would sign an agreement for five years. One condition in that agreement was that it was not to be signed by the executive officers of the Federation. Upon that condition most of the present trouble arose. The agreement was brought into operation three or four times. The executive officers have appealed to the Minmi miners to annul their agreement, but on each occasion the men have declined and have told the officers that they had never before worked under better conditions.

THE GENERAL POSITION.

Last Thursday the miners' delegate board which was presided over by Mr. E. Peters, acting president of the Colliery Employees' Federation, considered the general position, and the Minmi agreement. Mr. Peters informed the representative of the press that the board had decided on a certain course, but he was not disposed to say what it was. Evidently their decision was to consider the Minmi agreement and other matters at a special conference in Sydney.

In all probability, one of the ultimatums passed by the conference is in the direction of a strong threat, having as its ultimate end the abolition of the Minmi agreement. If a strike were declared at any time, all but the Minmi proprietors would suffer. The Minmi collieries could be kept working, while possibly all the other mines would be thrown idle.

A strike would be disastrous. The trade has just thrown off its dull coat, and is entering upon a busy season. The number of ships in the port is increasing, and the coal-loading cranes are being put to their full use every day.

It is believed that the funds of the Colliery Employees' Federation are low, and for that reason the miners' delegate board would, no doubt, hesitate before declaring a general stoppage. At the same time, the executive officers of the C.E.F. have hinted that if their unionism is to be continued, the Minmi agreement will have to be annulled.

An important step will no doubt be taken to-morrow, and further developments may be expected on Tuesday and Wednesday.

SOUTHERN STRIKE.

PRIEST BLAMES THE LEADERS.

EXECUTIVE UNION ACTION.

CLIFTON, Saturday.

To-day concludes the fifth week of the South Coast coal strike, and matters are no nearer to a final settlement than on the day the men first came out. That the majority of the men on the South Coast are now thoroughly in accord with the action taken by the aggregate meeting on Thursday last there can be no doubt, as many who a few days ago were quite ready and willing to resume operations, solely on the strength of the statement made by the Minister at the previous meeting of men in Wollongong, are now opposed to work being resumed until the wishes of the men are complied with.

It is estimated that since operations ceased at the South Coast mines fully £60,000 has been lost to the men in wages alone, whilst the loss to the business people and the district generally has been considerable.

WOLLONGONG, Sunday.

At the Roman Catholic Church this morning Father Walsh, of Wollongong, in the course of some remarks upon the social unrest throughout the district, pointed out that in no other place could be found a more decent or a more honest type of people than those on the South Coast, but unfortunately they were simple enough to be led away by one or two leaders. He exhorted them to exercise their common sense, and recollect that they had a duty to perform to themselves, their wives, and their children. He counselled them earnestly not to be led away, but if they received a fair and honest wage to do their duty to their homes, to those dependent upon them, and to their district.

APPEAL FOR FUNDS.

UNION AND THE PUBLIC.

WOLLONGONG, Sunday.

A circular has been distributed by the distributing committee of the Illawarra miners, with a view of raising funds for the miners and their families on strike. The appeal is as follows:—

Illawarra Colliery Employees' Association. To Fellow Unionists and the General Public,—We make the following appeal on behalf of the wives and children of the miners and others at present out of work, owing to a dispute between the colliery proprietors and the Illawarra Miners' Association, in connection with the victimising of a lodge secretary named James Russell. Judge Scholes, sitting as a Royal Commissioner, decided, after hearing both sides, that Russell had been wrongfully dismissed. Notwithstanding this decision, the proprietors refuse to reinstate Russell.

Subsequently two other members of the union were dismissed for refusing to comply with orders of the management, because by so doing they would have been breaking the award. This was pointed out to the manager, and the men then offered to submit the case to a tribunal, and were prepared to accept the finding of such tribunal. In reply, the manager stated that he would not be governed by any tribunal, and that if such tribunal found the men were innocent he would not reinstate them, but that he would then exercise his right under the special rules and dismiss them for disobedience. Hence we have this glaring anomaly: A manager, by exercising the power of dismissal given him under a special rule, can defy the decisions of every court in the State.

We have an award which gives us 11s per day for working deficient places. Yet there are many men working for far less, because they know full well that if they ask for their legal rights they run the risk of dismissal. Many men with families who would be useful trade unionists refrain from taking any part in the affairs of their lodge, dreading dismissal.

The South Coast miners are out in protest against the tyrannical treatment they have been subjected to by the employers. They have depleted their funds by fighting cases in the courts. They have sought and used every known legal method in order to get justice. The law has miserably failed them. Hence they are forced back upon their own resources. They want the law amended so as to give them adequate protection against victimisation. They are fighting for a principle vital to trade unionism, and without the protection asked for trade unionism becomes a farce, because the masters are able to dismiss every man that dares to stand up for the rights of his fellow workers.

The women and children affected by this stoppage must not suffer. Hence we make this appeal to fellow trade unionists and the general public, fully anticipating a generous response. Cheques and postal orders should be crossed, and made payable to James Russell, secretary of the distribution committee, E.S. and A. Bank, Wollongong.

HORSES SENT TO PADDOCKS.

Since the southern miners did not provide shiftmen to prepare the collieries for the contemplated resumption of work last week, the owners have abandoned the idea of making any present attempt to re-open the mines. The horses have been taken back to the paddocks, and, so far as the owners are concerned, the mines will remain idle until such time as the men are prepared to resume on the conditions prevailing when they ceased a month ago.

BARRIER STRIKE.

THE TROUBLE SETTLED.

MEN AGREE TO TERMS.

NON-UNIONISTS REMAIN.

BROKEN HILL, Sunday.

The Silverton Tramway trouble is settled, an agreement having been signed.

The strike came to a finish yesterday just at about noon. The Industrial Court had arranged to sit again at 11 o'clock, and a large crowd of men gathered in and about the courthouse anxiously waiting for news. At 11 o'clock, although the doors of the court were open, there was no sign of the members of the board. Just before noon the board and the solicitors entered the court. There was a look of relief on their faces, and it hardly needed the few words of the chairman, Mr. C. F. Butler, to tell that all was well.

Mr. Butler said that an agreement had been come to between the parties and that the matter was now taken out of the hands of the board. Then the Court adjourned sine die.

News of the settlement was soon known all over the city, and scores of urgent telegrams were despatched all over Australia.

Before 1 o'clock a new spirit took possession of the citizens, and briskness took the place of lethargy. The effect of the agreement was freely discussed, and it was openly admitted, even by the most rabid unionists, that the B.L.F. had been utterly defeated.

The B.L.F. men looked glum, and the average unionist said "I told you so."

The gladness that marked the settlement was somewhat marred in the case of the 6000 odd men out of work through the mines ceasing operations. "When will the mines restart?" was the question asked everywhere. That the companies had no wish to penalise the men who were out through no fault of their own was speedily proved by an official announcement by both Mr. Delprat and Mr. Horwood that work on the Proprietary would be resumed at midnight on Sunday. Then followed the news that the Central mine would restart underground work on Monday at 8 a.m., and mill work at 8 a.m. on Tuesday. The managements of the Junction North and Zinc Corporation let it be known that operations on their works would go along without any stoppage except for the usual Sunday interlude. Junction North had intended closing down at midnight on Saturday, and other mines let it be known that they would open up again as soon as the congestion of the ore and concentrates in the bins and trucks had been relieved and stores were available.

Mr. C. Eley, general manager of the Silverton tramway, stated on Saturday that the express passenger service would be resumed on Sunday night on the usual lines; also that the engines would be sent down the line that afternoon (Saturday) to bring up some of the fodder and foodstuffs lying in the trucks at Burns. Very soon the wheels were running, and the screech of whistles proclaimed the welcome news that the strike was over.

The trouble started on April 1, lasting just 19 days. There was no principle at stake, no low wages or harsh conditions to be remedied, simply the whim of a little band, most of whom would never be heard of if it were no' for the flashes of limelight these troubles shed upon them.

It is impossible to say how much money the idled men lost in wages. Certainly it was over £20,000, and business people and tradesmen all have lost something. It was a most costly strike.

Following is the full text of the agreement signed before the Industrial Board, which brought about the settlement of the dispute:—

"The terms of settlement as agreed upon between the Silverton Tramway Company, Ltd., and the B.L.F.:

"The men agree to resume work immediately, allowing the seven men to withdraw from the union, on the condition that there is no victimisation, and no prosecution, and that all the men are reinstated before 5 o'clock p.m. on Monday, April 21. These terms of settlement are to be by agreement and not to be subject to appeal, it being part of the settlement that the seven men shall not join any workmen's union or any union affiliated with any workmen's union. On the other hand, the Silverton Tramway Company will not ask any further exemptions beyond the said seven men, and any reduction in wages by the company except by the wages board of any member of the union shall be regarded as victimisation.

"Dated April 19, 1913, on behalf of the Silverton Tramway Company, J. R. Edwards. Witness, Anthony Hall, solicitor. On behalf of the Barrier Labour Federation, J. H. Pearce (chairman), Joseph James Hocking (secretary). Witness, Anthony Hall, solicitor; C. F. Butler, S.M., (chairman Industrial Board)."

THE PEACEMAKER.

BROKEN HILL, Sunday.

The settlement of the strike was greatly due to Mr. J. R. Edwards, solicitor for the S.T. Company. After two days' conference he wired to the Melbourne directors on Friday evening, making certain suggestions. The directors met in Melbourne at 10 a.m. on Saturday to discuss the situation, and replied by wire to Mr. Edwards, "We leave everything to you." When this was received all was plain sailing. The conference resumed, and the agreement followed.

"YOUR EVASIVE REPLY."

UNIONISTS' TELEGRAM TO PREMIER.

On Friday the Premier (Mr. M'Gowen) telegraphed Mr. David Tweedie, A.M.A., Broken Hill:—

"In reply to your telegram, this Government has already stated that it has no authority to construct line to Cockburn, and that if it did no solution of the present difficulty would be provided. Further, to take possession of Silverton Tramway wou'd cost the Government, according to their account, over four millions of money, while under the authority of Parliament a line can be constructed from Condobolin to link up our railway system for one and a quarter million. This the Government intends to do."

Another telegram was received by the Premier on Saturday from Mr. Tweedie. It read:—"Received your evasive reply. Calling meeting Saturday. When are you starting Condobolin line?"

QUESTION OF PROSECUTION.

STATEMENT BY THE MINISTER.

The statement in the terms of settlement that there are to be no prosecutions was brought under Mr. Carmichael's notice yesterday.

"I know nothing," he said, "about the arrangement for non-prosecution. It is a matter undertaken by the Government automatically. These proceedings are taken in every case. The employers, in whose hands the evidence is absolutely, are written to, and asked to supply the information for prosecutions. If they don't supply it, it is almost impossible for the Government to undertake prosecutions. I am not prepared to accept the report that the company has agreed not to prosecute. The chairman has not agreed to that. The agreement was fixed up outside the Court after the proceedings had gone a certain distance, and then the members returned to the Court, and stated that they had arrived at an agreement. His telegram to me mentions nothing about prosecutions at all."

LABOUR GOALS.

SIX OR FOUR HOURS A DAY.

MR. M'GOWEN AND MR. HOLMAN ATTACKED.

MELBOURNE, Sunday.

A social evening for the official reception of pioneers and visiting delegates in connection with the eight-hours' anniversary, was held last night in the old Trades Hall. Mr. R. H. Solly, M.L.A., presided over a large gathering.

Responding to the toast of the Federal Parliament, Senator M'Gregor (vice-president of the executive council) said that the Labour party would have a majority in the Senate in spite of all that could be done. He was sure also that Labour would have a majority in the House of Representatives, and that the present majority would be increased. (Loud applause.)

Mr. G. Elmslie, M.L.A. (Acting Leader of the State Opposition), responding to the toast of the State Parliament, said that he was disgusted at the methods adopted by the State Ministry to bring in men to this community. Within the past week the representatives of the Government had sent round to the various Ladies' Benevolent Societies of the metropolis, and instructed them to relieve any distress that existed from the want of employment by breadwinners. They said that in the coming winter the distress was going to be greater than ever, and were authorising the benevolent societies to spend any money within reason. The Government would back the bill. (Cries of shame.) On the one hand while they had Mr. Murray and Mr. Peacock and that crowd telling, under the seal of secrecy, all the people administering charity what to do, on the other hand, these men were still sending abroad to bring people out to this country to a market which they recognised as overstocked, and where men were out of work. (Cries of shame.)

In proposing "The Day we Celebrate" the president of the Trades Hall Council, Mr. Cohen, said that it was not intended to stop at an eight-hours day for workers. As a unionist he said publicly that had he his own way Mr. M'Gowen and Mr. Holman, who opposed the Labour movement, would no longer be members of the Labour movement. (Applause.) He prophesied that in the near future they would be celebrating not an eight-hours day, but a six-hours day, because eight hours a day was too long. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. G. Mead, president of the Political Labour Council, urged the people to insist on a six-hours day.

A voice: Four hours is quite long enough. (Loud applause.)

"Kindred Societies and Visiting Delegates" was proposed by Senator Russell, and responded to by half a dozen delegates, among others by W. O'Connor, of the Sydney eight-hours' committee, who said that the difference that now existed between the State Parliament of New South Wales and the Federal Parliament would be removed "at the crack of the whip." There would be no split this time. (Applause.)

STOCK TRADE.

OBSOLETE RAILWAY METHODS.

IMPORTANT EVIDENCE.

GLEN INNES, Saturday.

The Meat Industry and Abattoirs Board, with Mr. F. Flowers in the chair, held a sitting at the local courthouse yesterday. Evidence was given by several graziers and stock and station agents. They complained bitterly that they were notified only the day before in regard to the trucking hour of the following day, which created great confusion and prevented them getting their stock to the trucking yard in proper time. On other occasions, they said, stock were delayed for hours awaiting the arrival of trucks. In other cases insufficient trucks were supplied. The result was that stock had to be sent back to the paddocks again.

Conflicting evidence was given regarding the state of the trucks. Some witnesses said that they were in a filthy condition. Others declared that they were in fair condition. No complaint was made against the drivers and the guards of the stock trains, but complaints were made that it took 32 hours to convey stock from Glen Innes to Sydney.

Witnesses recommended that stock trains should be given preference over general goods trains. This, it was said, would shorten the transit by about eight hours. It was stated that landholders were opposed to conveying stock to Sydney to be killed, and favoured establishing abattoirs and freezing works in various parts of the country. One witness declared that cattle lost 40lb and sheep 6lb in weight during transit to Sydney; he added that in Queensland they could truck stock twice as quickly as in New South Wales, owing to having more up-to-date methods and more suitable trucks.

Some witnesses favoured unloading stock at Werris Creek for watering purposes. Others were opposed to untrucking during transit.

QUESTION OF A STRIKE.

MELBOURNE, Sunday.

The annual conference of the Victorian Railways Union was concluded yesterday.

A long, and at times heated, discussion took place in regard to a motion to the effect that the council should take a ballot of members as to the advisability of taking strike action in order to ensure the payment of a minimum wage of 8s per day to employees.

It was ultimately decided that no action should be taken at the present juncture, it being deemed advisable to await the result of the Federal referendum, which if carried would give the union the right to approach the Arbitration Court.

Another reason which influenced the conference in postponing action was that when the matter was raised in Parliament last year the Premier had shelved the question on the plea that not sufficient money was available, but had promised that the matter should be reconsidered this year.

MANNING STOKEHOLES.

COMPULSORY CONFERENCE.

MELBOURNE, Sunday.

On the application of the Commonwealth Steamship Owners' Association Mr. Justice Higgins, president of the Federal Arbitration Court, summoned a conference of representatives of the Steamship Owners' and the Federated Seamen's Union.

The owners, in their application for a conference, alleged that there was grave danger of an industrial dispute arising over the question of manning the stokeholes of interstate steamers. Four persons were summoned for the employers, and four for the employees, with the president of the Court as umpire, or such other persons as he might nominate if a difference occurred.

It was agreed that the employers and the employees should abide by the decision of the conference until the Navigation Bill of 1912 becomes law, or until the Federal Arbitration Court decides the question on an application to pay the award. The first meeting of the manning committee is to be held on April 23, at the office of the Industrial Registrar. It was also agreed that Mr. Arthur Cooper, of the Seamen's Federation, should communicate with all the branches of the federation, stating that the manning committee had been appointed, and that its decision must be obeyed, pending the Navigation Bill becoming law, or an order of the Court.

Mr. F. McDonald is to report to a like effect to all the interstate owners. Pending the decision of the manning committee all the existing conditions as to manning are to remain, except that as to the Zealandia the conditions appearing in a letter of Mr. A. Cooper to the manager of Huddart, Parker, Ltd., dated August, 1912, and agreed to by the association, are to be observed.

ROBBERY WITH VIOLENCE.

BOOT CLICKER ATTACKED.

MELBOURNE, Sunday.

Henry Macnamara, boot clicker, aged 35 years, was savagely attacked and robbed of £15 by several men early on Saturday morning, on a vacant allotment, known as Fitzroy Swamp. When he was admitted to the Melbourne Hospital his life was despaired of, but as the result of an operation his condition has improved. Three arrests have been made.

FERRY BOAT MYSTERY.

DECKHAND DISAPPEARS.

Denis Gleeson, a deckhand, of 147 Commonwealth-street, Surry Hills, signed-on in his capacity of deckhand of the all-night ferry steamer Wallaby on Saturday. He is now missing. The last the other members of the crew saw of him was at 4 a.m. yesterday, when the Wallaby stopped at M'Mahon's Point on the trip from Lavender Bay.

Yesterday the Water Police prosecuted a search without result.

SIR RIDER HAGGARD.

ETHICS OF LITERATURE.

IMAGINATION AND IMPERIALISM.

"BACK TO THE LAND."

Sir Rider Haggard has addressed many audiences since he embarked upon the present Empire tour, but he is hardly likely to have found a more appreciative one than that which listened to his address on Saturday evening. He was the guest of the Institute of Journalists at Sargent's cafe, Market-street. The president of the institute, Mr. T. Heney, presided, and the gathering included the Minister for Education, Mr. Carmichael.

The loyal toast having been honoured, that of "The State Ministry" was proposed in humorous vein by Mr. R. McMillan, Mr. Carmichael briefly responded.

The president in submitting the toast of "Sir Rider Haggard" said that their guest was not known by the cold, impersonal reputation of a figure in the great world, but by the warm affection due to one so well known in English literature. Of him it could be said that he uttered nothing base. Considering the distance and the time spent in travelling it was difficult to get eminent Englishmen to come to Australia. They were, therefore, pleased to welcome the commissioners, but especially pleased were they to see Sir Rider Haggard. They knew of his important services to agriculture in rural England, and in Denmark, and appreciated those services, for in Australia the prosperity of the people on the land meant the prosperity of the State. The report of the commission should be a living document, to be studied, read, marked, and learned, and turned to account, for the benefit of the Empire.

AMONG FRIENDS.

Sir Rider Haggard, who was cordially received, said that at first he had been at a loss what to say, for the position of a Royal Commissioner in a country like this was rather peculiar. On many things he would have to hold his tongue. Still there was no lack of subjects to deal with without committing the commission or himself. As for his official work that had been referred to, they would acquit him of anything vain or arrogant if he spoke of it, for having reached the age he had he knew that the further a man went in life the more complete should become his humility, and the wider his views, and the more he should realise how little he did understand. For everyone there was something to learn. It was in no spirit, then, of self-praise he spoke. The chairman had said it was something to have a name known wherever English was spoken, and he acknowledged that it was something. He was proud to learn that; proud to go to the remotest districts of the Empire and always find friends. They would better understand what he meant if they could see some of the letters he had received since his arrival in Australia, letters from invalids, and from dwellers in the bush.

THE LITERARY LIFE.

"The life of the person who writes fiction," continued Sir Rider, "is not altogether agreeable. I would not recommend any young man to take it up. It is full of hazards. Not one in a thousand succeeds; and not one in a thousand of those who succeed can hope to live—live in a literary sense. But if you happen to have taken it up, and if you have met with a measure of success, it is satisfactory to know that whatever the obstacles you encounter, whatever the criticism, envy, and abuse you get, still you have succeeded in the main object of giving pleasure to many thousands, and possibly millions, of human beings. (Applause.) You have succeeded in relieving a bed of sickness and infusing a little rosy glow into the sorrowful conditions of such as are hidden from the world; in fact, you have done a little good and no harm. (Applause.)

"But the hazard is great. More than that, to anybody who aims high it is a heart-breaking trade. One never knows but that he is a butterfly of the hour, like one of those brilliant creatures I saw up in Cairns, that flash by and are no more seen. The greatest names of one generation are forgotten the next. Sometimes they revive, and sometimes they are lost eternally. (Laughter.) I am proud to know that the books I wrote 30 years ago are selling better now than when they came out. (Applause.) If, mayhap, two or three survive one has done very well. If in this crowded age of ours, one can write a book that has in it the spirit of life, one has done something. The great masters that have gone before had a better chance.

SPURIOUS LITERATURE.

"As for the chairman's tribute that he (Sir Rider) had written nothing base, he assured his hearers that he had tried not to. It was so easy to write something base. He had noticed in Australia and in England, in going round the bookshops, that some of the books were not desirable. He was sorry to say it, but mostly these books were written by women, and there was a large sale for them. If the ladies who turned them out quite understood what they were doing they would 'turn off the tap.' As men of the world they knew that there were enough things to fight in life without putting more obstacles in the way. They all had a pretty stiff fight in the world, and it should be the business of men and women to make the fight easier. These were old-fashioned views he held; in Australia they called them, he believed, the views of a 'Wowser.' (Laughter.) But still he held to them. (Applause.) As one having some experience in fiction he said that nothing was easier than to write books of the sort he had referred to. He could do it with the greatest of ease if he felt so inclined, but he would not do it for a million pounds. (Applause.)

A PAGE FROM HISTORY.

"There comes, however, in the life of the man who has an all-round brain, and tries to think, a period when he is not satisfied with works of fiction of an imaginary character, and he likes to do something practical in the world, something that affects his generation, something not only on the imaginative side. In me there stands before you almost the only survivor of the Shepstone expedition, that annexed the Transvaal in 1877. Theophilus Shepstone was a great man. He took me with him—borrowed me from the Government of Natal, on whose staff I was. I was there during that stirring time, and with my own hand I hoisted the British flag in the Transvaal in 1877. (Applause.) You cheer—but I lived to see it pulled down. That policy was reversed, but at what a cost! The policy of Sir Theophilus Stepstone was reinstated as a part of the Imperial programme at a cost of £300,000,000 and 20,000 lives of citizens of the Empire. That was the cost. That was my beginning of active life.

THE LAND QUESTION.

"After Majuba I said that South Africa was no place for an Englishman, and I left the country. But the 'pull' of Africa got hold of me, and I began to write. It was a dangerous thing to write. (Laughter.) I have never quite got rid of the temptation, so I have gone on writing. But at the same time I desired to do something more. I looked round the world. I now belonged to that contemned crowd, the country squire. (Laughter). I thought there was a great deal to be taught the world about land. (Hear, hear.) Twenty years ago I devoted myself to the cause of preaching to the people of the world that their safety lies only in the land. (Applause.) If they desert the land for the city, so surely do they write on the wall the prophecy of their own doom. (Applause.) I saw that. I am a landowner. I tried to do the best I could in that direction. I have preached that doctrine ad nauseam. I spent two of the hardest years of my life in travelling through rural England compiling those tremendous folios 'Rural England,' and I venture to hope that in a hundred years or more they must be consulted as regards English agriculture of our time. (Applause.)

"Then I went to Denmark and tried to do other things in that connection. With the same object I have come here—(applause)—as a member of a Royal Commission, and I feel it a great honour to be on that commission. But what does it mean? Three years spent in arduous travelling, at one's own expense, more or less; three years at a time of life when years become valuable, collecting information which probably no one will read. (Dissent.)

"I went to the British Museum, and when I told the greatest Egyptologist that I was nominated for the commission, he said: 'Do you mean to tell me that you, the only man who can write interestingly about Egypt, are going to waste three years of your life serving upon a Royal Commission?' (Laughter.) Perhaps he did not quite realise that there are things in the Empire to which any man should be proud to sacrifice three years. (Applause.)

PROBLEMS OF EMPIRE.

"You are aware that the eternal problems of civilisation are as pressing here as anywhere else. Questions of poverty, drink, population are pressing on every side. I know why General Booth asked me to investigate the social system of England, and involve myself in visits to the slums of the great cities of England to look into the matter. I know what are the questions of our civilisation. Even here you have the poor—though I don't know where they are. (Laughter.) I believe there are some who drink, even in Australia. To these problems of the age we should apply our imagination. I believe I have an imaginative side—or it is generally so supposed. (Laughter.) But I have a practical side. I want to argue that imagination should be applied to practical matters a great deal more than it is to-day. (Applause.) Imagination is a quality largely contemned by British people. They think that a person with imagination is a person to be instructed. (Laughter.) He writes fiction—how can he be good for anything else? (Laughter.) But what you want in all practical affairs is a little more imagination. (Applause.)

A DEFINITION.

"What is imagination? I always think it is a reflection on something which we cannot see; and it is quite possible that we can imagine nothing that is not with some sense true. (Hear, hear.) It is, is it not, always the shadow of the truth? In our sense it is understanding. Take an example in the matter of fallen humanity—a degraded man. No man is entirely bad. I believe if we get to the heart of the worst man we will, by the aid of a little imagination, find some good; and if still working by that imagination you can touch the good and redeem him. (Applause.) I believe that the villain of the novel does not really exist. (Hear, hear.) I confess that imagination seems to me a high quality. I am tempted to think that the Great Architect of the Universe must be a glorious shining embodied imagination.

"FACE THE FACTS."

"So we should have a little more imagination in the affairs of the Empire. We talk about the Empire. We are proud of the British Empire. (Applause.) Let us face the facts of the Empire. There is a population, without subject races, of sixty millions. Are 60,000,000 white people enough to hold a quarter of the globe? Should not that sixty millions be increased somehow? You have a little country called Australia. Am I right when I say you have only four and a half million people? I ask you to call your imagination into play, and reflect by the aid of that light whether it is worth while to increase that population. (Hear, hear.) Conditions might very well arise here when you would wish you had more than four and a half millions. I speak not from the standpoint of your immediate conditions, but in the light of what may be 50 or a hundred years hence. (Hear, hear.) I would add, therefore, that I think what you need is not more hard-headed business men, but men who look a little forward—not politicians, but statesmen. Look to the future. Bring your imagination to the study of passing events. If this is done, and if we face the difficulties before us—I do not speak of Australia, Canada, or England, but the whole Empire—I think there is yet time, that the Empire may acquire a place unprecedented in the tale of the world; it may sail to a safe and glorious dominion. I think also that if it fail to do this, if it fail to look each of these things in the eye, then it is quite possible it will become but a wreck on the shore of Time through which will wail the winds of history." (Loud applause.)

"AN ABSOLUTE NECESSITY."

Mr. J. C. Watson, in voicing his appreciation of Sir Rider Haggard's address, emphasised the absolute necessity for more population in Australia. On that point, he said, they were all agreed, however they might differ on the means to be employed. He said it would be difficult to over-estimate the value of the Empire Commission, and there was no fear of the report being consigned to official pigeonholes, seeing that it would be the product of such able commissioners.

The health of Mr. T. R. Roydhouse, who is about to leave for a trip to England, was honoured, and the toast of the chairman, proposed by Sir Rider Haggard, concluded proceedings.

NORTH QUEENSLAND TRIP.

SIR RIDER HAGGARD SILENT.

Asked as to his impressions of North Queensland on his return on Saturday from his trip, Sir Rider Haggard said that he had gone on the business of the Empire Commission, and was not at liberty to make any statement at the present time. All he would say was that it was "a beautiful country." "Did you form any opinion as to the white labour question?" a reporter asked. "I can't say," he replied, as he hurried off to join Sir Edgar Vincent.

MR. COOK IN BRISBANE.

A SPLENDID RECEPTION.

WILL REPLY TO MR. FISHER.

BRISBANE, Sunday.

Mr. J. Cook, Federal Liberal leader, arrived in Brisbane on Saturday evening by mail train from a tour of the northern parts of N.S.W., and was accorded a magnificent reception at the central station.

Mr. Cook said: "I have hopes that on May 31 we shall be able to strike a blow for freedom again in this country—a blow which will enable us to do away with a lot of restrictive legislation now in contemplation, and let the people be free to pursue their way in life according to their own desires and within the law. This is essentially a fight for freedom—(cheers)—and a fight for liberty." (Cheers.)

Interviewed subsequently, Mr. Cook referred to the fact that the rolls were not yet available in his own State. "The people in the country districts," he said, "are in the greatest indignation about it, and if the man who runs the show—I mean Mr. O'Malley, of course—could hear some of the polite expressions of those who want to vote, and are not yet know if they can, he would come to the conclusion that he was not the best business man in the Commonwealth, and that it would not, as he has so often alleged, pay the Commonwealth to give him a million a year to run the business department. So far this gentleman attempts to get out of it by saying the delay is in the N.S.W. Government printing office, which, of course, is controlled by a Labour socialistic Government; so that it lies between them somewhere; and somehow the trouble primarily arose from the despicable attempts to jerrymander the electorates of N.S.W., and to turn down two redistribution schemes and hold up a third with the intention of doing the same.

"I am going to Maryborough to-morrow to pay my compliments to the Prime Minister, returning those he repeatedly paid me in Parramatta. Mr. Fisher has been in my town repeatedly. This will be my first return call, just out of politeness, of course, and to observe the conventionalities."

Discussing the prospects of the Liberal party in the coming fight, Mr. Cook said that they were decidedly satisfactory and encouraging. There was no room for pessimism. The great thing was to get the Liberal vote out, and he had every reason to believe that this time it was going to be polled so far as the determined restrictions of the Government would allow them.

Mr. Cook leaves Sydney on May 1 for Victoria, and will spend ten days there. Afterwards he will visit Tasmania and South Australia.

FERRY FARES.

PROTEST FROM ST. LEONARDS.

At the last meeting of the St. Leonards Political Labour League the following resolutions were carried:—"That this league expresses its absolute disapproval of the action of the Sydney Ferries Company in exorbitantly raising the price of their season tickets, particularly as regards the juvenile members of the North Sydney community, and considers the increase unwarrantable; that the Government be urged to expedite a competitive ferry; and, further, that, when the Harbour Trust issues a fresh lease to the company, a clause should be inserted that the ferries company must disclose its profits, and by those disclosed profits justify the increase."

CHATSWOOD FATALITY.

THREE MEN IN A SULKY.

Three men—Rupert Bullivant, 29, George Bullivant, 22, and James King, of Little Walker-street, North Sydney—were out driving in a sulky yesterday afternoon. In Gordon-road the horse shied, and, swerving violently to the roadside, overturned the sulky. The three men were thrown out. Rupert Bullivant sustained a bad concussion of the brain, and James King concussion of the brain and face and head abrasions. The second brother Bullivant escaped without serious injury. The two men were taken to the North Shore Hospital. At 9 o'clock last night Rupert Bullivant died.

A HIPPODROME FOR SYDNEY.

In a short speech at the close of the Wirth's Circus season on Saturday evening, Mr. Philip Wirth announced that when the show returned to Sydney next year it would appear in what it was hoped to make the finest building of its kind in the world. Wirth Bros. had acquired a 21 years' lease of the Belmore Markets, and building operations would be commenced immediately to convert it into an amusement resort on the lines of the London and New York Hippodromes, with all the very latest improvements and facilities.

HIGH PRICES.

RESULT OF LABOUR RULE.

MR. WADE'S CURE.

SPEECH AT LEICHHARDT.

POLITICAL PENDULUM SWINGS BACK.

"What do you propose to do so as to bring down the high cost of living, Mr. Wade?" The question came from a heckling Labour supporter.

Mr. Wade: "My prescription is three years more of the Wade Government." (Loud and prolonged cheering.)

This interlude took place at the Leichhardt Town Hall on Saturday night, when a large gathering was assembled to hear an address from the State Liberal leader, mainly on the subject of the referendum proposals.

The chair was occupied by Mr. R. Cunningham, president of the local Liberal League, who described Mr. Wade as "one of the greatest leaders New South Wales has ever had."

Mr. Wade, who received a most cordial reception, said on May 31 they would be called upon to vote for a senator, a local Federal member, and the referendum proposals. They were asked to practically revolutionise their form of government by the far-reaching and drastic proposals now before them. Two years ago they had been rejected by an enormous vote, and he knew of no change of public opinion likely to reverse the vote then given. (Applause.) There was no doubt that they could not separate the referendum proposals from their future prosperity or failure, and the question arose how far were they fraught with danger or benefit for them?

COST OF LIVING.

They had it brought home to them that there was something wrong with the cost of living, and it was significant that the change was most marked under the reign of a Government the members of which had said that if they were returned to power they would bring about a cheap breakfast table and a general cheapening in the cost of living. There was an increase in prices all round, and a sovereign to-day would only go as far as 15s went three years ago.

THE WEAK SPOT.

He could lay his finger on the weak spot, and it was the reckless way that the Labour party had imposed taxation, both State and Federal, all over Australia. (Cheers.) Taxes were passed on, and in the final result those who bore the taxation were the great mass of consumers—the people. It would be found that the increase in Federal taxation amounted to £6,000,000 every year, and New South Wales carried an increasing burden of this Commonwealth taxation representing £2,750,000. In New South Wales the actual increase they were compelled to meet beyond what it was when Mr. M'Gowen took office was £3,100,000. This had all arisen in the space of three years.

They had in the State an unprecedented expansion of expenditure, which had caused a dear money market, resulting in the rate of interest being raised to more than 4 per cent., while ordinary individuals had to pay 1 or 2 per cent. in excess of it. Comparing the various Australian Labour and Liberal Governments, the increase in expenditure during three years represented 52 per cent. where Labour Governments were in power; whereas where Liberal Governments were in power the increase was only 15 per cent. (Applause.)

EFFECT ON SYDNEY.

An official calculation had been made of the relative cost of living in Sydney and other Australian centres. Taking the standard as 1000, Melbourne was normal and Sydney 1012, or nearly as high as the cost of living in Broken Hill. It had been officially reported that a home which could be built for £420 two years ago would now cost £500 from the same material. Taxation had been increasing at an alarming rate, and the worker was no better off for the higher wages obtained under Liberal wages boards. That was not right, and it must be altered. (Cheers.)

Mr. Hughes had claimed credit for the increase in marriages and the increase in births—(laughter)—and there were few things Mr. Hughes and Mr. Fisher were not prepared to claim as theirs if they thought they could capture votes.

A QUESTION.

He would ask Mr. Fisher and Mr. M'Gowen what had they done to reduce the cost of living? Mr. Holman, before he joined the dukes in England—(laughter)—had made some statement on the matter; but all Mr. M'Gowen's Government had done was to appoint a Royal Commission. (Laughter.) Now for the first time they heard a suggestion from the Federal Government about wicked rings and combines. If there were trusts, which did not spring up as a rule suddenly, they could take it they were in existence some years ago. (Applause.) Mr. M'Gowen must have known three years ago that, if these trusts existed, they were dangerous, and Mr. M'Gowen should tell them what he had done to stop the aggression of these so-called trusts. The Liberals had passed a law to protect people from trusts and combines, but the Labour party had never made use of it. (Cheers.)

A voice: What about the Tory Upper House?

Mr. Wade said that while one plank of the Labour party was to abolish the Upper House, in practice they had added to it in the State. The Labour party were more concerned with their own safe seats than they were for the welfare of the country.

MR. HUGHES AND TRUSTS.

Mr. Hughes had never said yet why, while there were two Acts on the Statute Book dealing with trusts and combines, he had turned a blind eye on his own new Act, and, in the recent prosecution in the High Court, had used the one that all knew was out of date. It was time for Mr. Hughes to say the law was useless when he had tested it. (Cheers.) They had only put the law in operation against one alleged combine, and with legal machinery that ought to be on the scrap heap. (Applause and laughter.) The mere fact that no action had been taken against combines was reasonable cause for believing that it was not the combines which were robbing them to-day, but unnecessarily heavy taxation. A Federal inquiry was held into the tobacco trust, and no evidence was found that it charged unfair charges, the commission recommending that it should not be disbanded, this being a recommendation by a body which consisted largely of Labour members. So, with the so-called sugar monopoly, which was ever in the mouths of advocates of the referendum proposals. They had heard of a fish ring, but an inquiry revealed that there was fair competition among traders.

There was said to be a brick combine, and the State set out with the declared object of bringing the price down to £1 per 1000. (Laughter.) Figures last June showed that the Government produced the bricks only 5s less than the private brick manufacturers, £2 10s, as against £2 15s, and because there was a difference of 5s, they were asked, by advocates of the referendum proposals, to believe that these people were trying to rob the public. They could trace the rise in prices to the alarming rate at which taxation was rising. (Cheers.)

The only prospect, if they supported the referendum proposals, was further taxation and more burdens on their already over-burdened shoulders.

The machinery now on the Statute Book against trusts was the most drastic in the civilised world.

NEW PROTECTION.

The Labour party said they were going to help the worker by an instalment of new protection. New protection meant a living wage to all workers, but that living wage could be obtained in any part of Australia by existing State machinery. (Applause.)

No less than 240 wages boards had been appointed in this State, under his Industrial Act, and nearly all awards had involved the granting of at least a living wage. (Applause.) A living wage was all New Protection could offer, and provision for obtaining it was in existence two years ago, when the referendum proposals were defeated.

NATIONALISATION CONFISCATION.

One of the proposed constitutional amendments was the right to nationalise anything the Federal Parliament might choose to declare a monopoly. It was a pretty large power, and he knew of no country which had said that a man should be deprived of his business without the right of appeal to the courts of the country. (Cheers.) Nationalisation meant something more than hitting at big corporations, and it meant waging war against every business man, large or small.

Although Labour members had a padlock on their mouths, they were allowed to take a run off the chain once a fortnight or so, just to air themselves. (Hear, hear.) On such occasions they, in the exuberance of their spirit, spoke what was really in their hearts. According to one of them on such an occasion, Mr. Foster, M.P., a member of the Labour party, the commercial traveller, as a middleman, was to go if the referendum proposals were carried. Mr. Foster said that, where 100 carts were wanted to-day, 10 would suffice under nationalisation. He also said small shopkeepers were to go, and small traders were to be abolished. Nationalisation accordingly was another name for confiscation and robbery. (Cheers.)

LABOUR'S MILLENNIUM.

Under Mr. Fisher's millennium down would go the tip-carter and the small trader. What would become of them he (Mr. Wade) did not know, and the Labour party did not care. (Applause.) The Labour party said if the referendum proposals were not carried they were going to increase the protective duties, so that he might squeeze the worker all the more, and that, forsooth, was humanity and democracy. (Cheers.) It was not so much the working men they had in their minds as the word "v-o-t-e."

EMBEDDED IN TAXATION.

He complained of the referendum proposals because they were at the present time embedded in heavy taxation, and the proposals would extend the opportunities of extravagance. While life was now unpleasant, if the referendum were carried it would be unbearable. (Applause.) Trusts were the creature of America, and had abused the tariff there to rob the people. The remedy existed here, and if an industry abused the tariff the duty protecting such an industry should be removed, and outside competition would then kill the trust. (Cheers.) The referendum proposals were an appeal merely to class prejudice, and would strip the Australian Parliaments of the powers they enjoyed, so that the functions left to them would hardly justify the States remaining. This in the end meant unification, and trying to govern this big continent from one centre, which was absolutely impossible. (Cheers.) Legislation would, under unification, become congested, and the States would find their development hindered, and their progress stagnated. (Applause.)

The tendency in England was only to leave with the Imperial Government national questions, and it should be remembered that England was comparatively a small and compact country. (Applause.) They had the experience of the States of America to guide them at this juncture, and the Federal scheme had not there been altered for 130 years. (Hear, hear.) He would ask them whether America had advanced during the last 100 years. (Applause.) The undoubted advance that America had made had taken place under a Constitution that left local questions to local people. (Applause.) Proof of that fact was obtainable in Mr. James Bryce's text-book on the American Constitution. They should take the example of America, and what was good enough for the cute Yankee was quite good enough for them in Australia. (Applause.)

MR. FISHER'S BEATING.

In conclusion, Mr. Wade said that after the defeat of the referendum proposals two years ago Mr. Fisher should have taken his beating like a man. (Cheers.) The law directed against press political criticism during the progress of an election was an eternal disgrace to the party who passed it. (Cheers.)

The crowning feat of degradation by the Federal Labour party was the repeal of the postal vote. (Cheers.) Mr. Fisher fought the last election with the postal vote in operation, and when he found that out of the 50,000 postal votes the big majority were Liberal, he immediately repealed the law. (Applause, and cries of "Shame.") If the handicap was now in Mr. Fisher's favour, all the more disgrace to his party. (Cheers.)

What was bringing the Labour movement into disrepute were the men who hung on to office at the sacrifice of principle, and to the injury of the many thousands of their followers who deserved better treatment. The working man was worse off under Labour regime, and Labour members were more concerned for their own selfish interests than for their followers outside the House. (Applause.) The electors would, he believed, now return to Parliament a majority they could trust and respect. (Loud cheering.)

Mr. H. A. Scott, the Liberal candidate for Dalley, delivered a vigorous speech, in which he attacked Labour administration for inconsistency and looseness. He received a splendid hearing.

A PROTEST.

On the motion of Mr. A. Ireland it was resolved,—

"We the electors of Dalley, in public meeting assembled, hereby enter our emphatic protest against the injustice inflicted by the Federal Government in failing to have the rolls prepared in time to allow us to ascertain if our names are on the said rolls, and, if not, to remedy the omission."

On the motion of Mr. Bruntnell, M.L.A., a hearty vote of thanks was accorded Mr. Wade for his address. Mr. Bruntnell contrasted Mr. Wade's reception there that night to what was the case two years ago, and said it showed that the political pendulum had swung back to normal. (Cheers.)

The meeting closed with cheers for Mr. Wade and Mr. Scott.

The party left the settled districts of South Australia early in January, and on July 24 Stuart dipped his hands in the waters of the Indian Ocean. They got back to Adelaide in December, when the South Australian Parliament voted Stuart £2000, though they had some two or three years before, in a burst of enthusiasm, offered £10,000 to the first man to cross Australia. Those who accompanied him were William Keekwich, F. W. Thring, W. P. Auld, Stephen King, J. W. Billiatt, J. Frew, H. Nash, J. M'Gorrery, and J. W. Waterhouse.]

DOMINIONS' COMMISSION.

NORTHERN TERRITORY.

DR. GILRUTH'S EVIDENCE.

WHITES CAN DEVELOP IT.

MR. GRIFFITH ON LOAN EXPENDITURE

The Dominions' Royal Commission continued the taking of evidence concerning the State, at Parliament House on Saturday. The chairman, Sir Edgar Vincent, presided, and the following members were present:—Sir Alfred Bateman, Sir H. Rider Haggard, Mr. W. Lorimer, and Mr. T. Garnett (Great Britain), and Mr. J. R. Sinclair (New Zealand).

Dr. Gilruth, Administrator of the Northern Territory, stated that various attempts had been made to develop the Territory agriculturally and pastorally. A railway had been built 146 miles from Port Darwin, to Pine Creek, which went mostly through mineralised country. There were also wharfs at Port Darwin. Outside of these two things, it was difficult to see what had been done in the Territory in the shape of developments. Agriculture, so far, had not been a success, owing to the absence of suitable labour; attempts had been made to grow sugar, cotton, and coffee; they must attempt to develop the Territory with white labour. The area was 530,000 square miles; outside a few streets in Port Darwin there were no roads. It could be developed pastorally, and dairying could be carried on. There was only a small part of it surveyed, and in general appearance it was like the rest of Australia. Mitchell grass grew well there, and was suitable for sheep and cattle.

TERRITORY RIVERS.

Navigable rivers enabled them to get into the interior of the country. The rainfall varied from 60 inches to 10 inches, and sub-artesian water could be found anywhere. No attempt so far had been made to bore for artesian water proper. At one place he had found hot water flowing out of the earth, as at Rotorua (N.Z.). The Roper River rose apparently from an artesian source, from a limestone formation.

Sir Edgar Vincent: With its natural advantages, why have the pastoral and grazing products of the Territory hitherto been comparative failures?

Dr. Gilruth: It is too far away. Even now a man had to send his stock either to Queensland, South Australia, or Western Australia. Another factor was that, when the industries were beginning to go ahead, tick fever, introduced by the Cable Company from Java, broke out amongst the cattle.

The Chairman: What is the present population?—Two thousand whites and 2000 Chinese.

And how many aborigines?—10,000 or 20,000.

The number is unknown, I suppose?—Yes; unknown. They are employed on the pastoral estates, and very useful people they are.

Have you any immigration from Southern Europe?—No.

No immigration of Greeks, Southern Italians, or Maltese?—No.

Witness said that the present Chinese population was what remained of the coolies who built the railway. Port Darwin was the only natural harbour, and there was 22ft depth at the wharf. There was a rise and fall in the tide of 25ft.

FREEZING WORKS.

Freezing works were, said the administrator, being erected to encourage the pastoral industry, and the railway was being carried 60 miles further to the Katherine River, the survey being now finished. It was proposed to go on with the railway as far as Mataranka (Bitter Springs). The country thereabout was admirably suited for sheep and cattle, the rainfall being 30 inches.

Dr. Gilruth gave it as his opinion on the question of railway communication with the south that the proposed line might bend to the east of the telegraph line, so that it might traverse the tableland country. The distance of this bend would not be more than 100 miles, and the country, being flat, presented no engineering difficulties. After that an investigation might show that it should run to the mouth of the Macarthur River on the Gulf, where a good harbour could be made. Then, if the Queensland railway were carried to Camooweal it could junction with the line at the north of the Macarthur River, the distance being 200 or 300 miles. That would give a natural railway connection, so to speak, with Queensland. It had to be borne in mind that when the Commonwealth took the Territory over it was part of the agreement that the line should be made from Darwin to South Australia some time. That, of course, could not be lost sight of. The pastoral country extended down to the MacDonnell Ranges, which were 4000ft high.

DESERT IDEA EXPLODED.

Sir Edgar Vincent: Then, the idea of a great central desert is exploded?—Yes; there is comparatively little unwatered country.

Dr. Gilruth said that the development of the country was dependent upon railway communication, and he advocated that being proceeded with as rapidly as possible, and a railway could be taken to South Australia and Queensland both. All the country that these lines would traverse would be good, with the exception of about 50 miles, and, if it were desired to put the lines, through good country all the way, it could be done.

Sir Edgar Vincent: So that you conceive the possibility of huge districts now unoccupied being settled under pastoral settlement?—Yes.

That would give Australia a very much larger population than it has?—Yes.

MOTOR HAULAGE FAVOURED.

Dr. Gilruth said that he favoured motor haulage for the interior of the Territory, in preference to horse teams. He gave it as his opinion that the third generation of people living in the Territory were quite healthy.

To Sir Alfred Bateman: The debt of the Territory was £2,780,000. Cotton grew wild all over the place.

To Mr. Sinclair: Rice and maize grew splendidly in the Territory. For 26 blocks of land recently made available, there were 500 applications, and of the 26 settlers who were selected, 24 were married men. They were now making the attempt to grow sugar commercially.

SUITABLE FOR COTTON.

To Mr. Garrett: The larger portion of the Territory was highly suitable for the growth of cotton. He was aware that there was a great demand for the better classes of cotton. There had been no experimental cotton patches, but what he had seen growing wild was growing in profusion. It was of a good staple.

Mr. Garnett: That is important, because there is a great and increasing demand for cotton of a good staple.

Dr. Gilruth said that increase of population was what they wanted. He had given attention to the question of immigration of Southern Europeans, who, he thought, would do very well in the Territory. They would grumble less. The coldest day was hotter than or as hot as was experienced in summer in England or Scotland. The men from Queensland suited the Territory better than the men who came from the south of Australia. The immigration of Maltese was being considered, and he thought they would be suitable from what he had read. They were British subjects. The tableland was 1000 feet high, and he had not seen cotton growing there.

"What the black or coloured man can do, the white man can do," was Dr. Gilruth's concluding remark to Mr. Garnett. "Touching the children," he added, "there were no deaths last year at all. There are about 150 altogether."

To the Chairman: White labour was really cheaper in the Territory than Chinese, if the whites were reliable and sober.

INTERIOR WELL KNOWN.

To Mr. Lorimer: Although the Territory had not been surveyed, it had been traversed and more or less was known of it. From what he had heard, the railway was sufficient for pastoral purposes. The Chinese there were chiefly engaged in mining, and had really spoilt it by pot-holing, looking for rich finds. The whites were mostly on stations and in Government employ. The cattle there were immune from tick. The possibilities for railway extensions were enormous. Mataranka was 600 or 700 feet high. Tin, gold, copper, and wolfram were being mined in the Territory. In the past mining had come to a standstill when they got to 240ft, the water-level. Now they were subsidising developmental mining £ for £. The subsidy was on the work actually done, and at approved places. It was quartz mining. There had been £2,000,000 worth of gold taken out of the Territory, but gold mining was at a standstill. Prospecting was now proceeding. The mining development had all been in proximity to the railway line. There had been a flying geological survey by the South Australian Government geologist, and another survey by Professor Woolnough. The largest area of pre-Cambrian limestone in the world was there. There was plenty of iron. There was no coal.

Mr. Lorimer: It might be worth while to ship the iron ore?—I got hold of a piece of ore that was almost all iron, but it was a long way from shipping.

Dr. Gilruth said that selectors coming to the Territory were not expected to have a great deal of capital. The Government tried to find work for them at first on the roads. The distance from Oodnadatta to Port Darwin was 1200 miles, the same as from Coolgardie to Port Augusta.

STATE PUBLIC WORKS.

Mr. A. Griffith, State Minister for Public Works, was examined. Of the £100,000,000 debt of the State £88,000,000 was sunk in productive public works, on conservation works £1,250,000, on national roads and bridges £1,750,000, on harbours and rivers £4,750,000, totalling £7,750,000, on public buildings £4,000,000—accounting for the £100,000,000. The taxpayers did not pay any of the interest on this £100,000,000, it being paid out of public revenue. The net yearly revenue from railways and tramways was £2,6[illegible],000. The net returns from public works undertakings generally was £3,6[illegible],000, that is, the works upon which the public loans were invested. They were not only no charge to the public, but they gave a net profit of £300,000 per year.

The Chairman: So that the financial position of the State is unusually good?

Mr. Griffith: I wish it was a trading concern and I owned it. (Laughter.)

The Chairman put questions directed to the point as to whether it would not be better to segregate the loan money devoted to railway development.

RETURNS FROM LOANS.

Mr. Griffith gave figures to show that the more money borrowed the better the financial position of the State. When £45,500,000 was invested in railways the return was 3.3 per cent., and now that £62,000,000 was invested the return was 4.26. Ten years ago £2,780,000 was invested in Sydney Harbour Trust Works, and the return was 3.5 per cent., whereas, now that £5,750,000 was invested, the return was 5.18 per cent. Ten years ago £9,500,000 was invested in water and sewerage works at Newcastle and Sydney; the return was 2.7 per cent., and now, with £13,800,000 invested, the return was 3.15 per cent. The State exports increased from £15,975,000 in 1902 to £33,000,000 in 1912, and the exports from £15,000,000 to £22,250,000. The Government revenue had increased from £11,000,000 to £15,750,000 in the last 10 years, and there had been no increase in taxation.

RAILWAY EXTENSIONS.

Speaking of railway extension, Mr. Griffith said he had travelled all over the country, and had come to the conclusion that if, instead of expending £1,000,000 a year, he had the money to spend £2,000,000, he could make the railways pay and develop the country. At present the State was borrowing £6,000,000 a year for general purposes.

The Chairman: Your point is that really the development of the State is being retarded by the absence of more liberal public works expenditure?—Yes.

Referring to the list of non-paying lines as described by the Chief Railway Commissioner, Mr. Griffith said that if the branch lines received credit for the prosperity of the railway lines generally, there would not be one that could be considered non-paying.

The Chairman: Your working expenses on the railways have gone up very largely. If that process continues, how will you keep the railway expenditure remunerative?

Mr. Griffith: I do not know.

The Chairman: It is outside you?

Mr. Griffith: Yes.

GENERAL EVIDENCE.

Mr. W. Schey, Director of Labour for the New South Wales Government, gave evidence that the Pitt Town Labour Farm was a successful institution, and was capable of indefinite extension. The boys who passed through it were able to earn their living. The branches of the Labour Bureau throughout the State supplied periodic reports.

Mr. P. H. Morton gave evidence respecting the success of private subdivision of land from the point of view of the buyers, sellers, and the State. He and those associated with him had dealt with 450,000 acres, and had not had one foreclosure. The land was generally sold for a 20 per cent. deposit, and the balance in 10 annual instalments at 5 per cent. interest. Settlers often preferred to buy privately, because of the absence of restrictions with which purchasers from the Government were surrounded. There was an enormous area that could be privately subdivided with profit to all concerned.

IMPRESSIONS ON FARMING.

To Sir Rider Haggard: The farming generally throughout the State was not good.

Sir Rider Haggard: That bears out what I have seen.

Farming fell short because of the irregularity of work on it, said Mr. Morton.

"I notice," said Sir Rider Haggard, "a large part of the country in Queensland mastered by prickly pear."

Mr. Morton said that there was little prickly pear in New South Wales, but it was now found that it had value for paper-making and gum envelope purposes.

Sir Rider Haggard: It has value for ostrich food, too.

The Commission then adjourned till Tuesday.

LORD DOUGLAS REBUKED.

JUDICIAL INDIGNATION.

LONDON, April 18.

During the hearing of the action for libel brought by Lord Alfred Douglas against Arthur Ransome and the "Times" Book Club in connection with Mr. Ransome's book on the late Oscar Wilde, Mr. Justice Darling displayed his indignation at the behaviour of Lord Alfred Douglas.

At the request of Lord Alfred Douglas, portions of Wilde's "De Profundis" were read, during which Lord Alfred Douglas left the court. The Judge ordered his return, and severely rebuked him.

An official of the British Museum stated that the manuscript of "De Profundis" had been lodged in the Museum on condition that it remained unopened till 1960, when the question of its publication could be considered.

CLUB-SWINGING FEAT.

BURROWS LASTS 107 HOURS.

LONDON, April 20.

Tom Burrows was successful in his attempt to swing clubs for 100 hours at Aldershot, but he continued because he had heard that there was an unauthenticated American record of 110 hours. Several military bands played with a view to keeping his spirits up, and oxygen was twice administered to prevent him falling asleep.

When he had been swinging for 107 hours, however, Burrows showed signs of delirium. At last the sprinkling of water in his face by his attendants irritated him to such an extent that, in a delirious rage, he attacked them with his clubs and his fists. He was, however, promptly mastered and quickly calmed down.

Shortly after he went to sleep, and an examining doctor reported that his heart and his pulse were normal.

ASSOCIATION FOOTBALL.

ENGLISH CUP FINAL.

LONDON, April 20.

The final for the Football Association Cup between Aston Villa and Sunderland, at Crystal Palace yesterday, resulted in a win for the former by one goal to nil.

A crowd of 90,000 people witnessed the match.

During the progress of the game a stand collapsed, and five persons were injured.

Aston Villa, the famous Birmingham club, by their victory over Sunderland, has secured possession of the cup for the fifth time. As far back as 1886, when professional football in England was in its infancy, they lifted the trophy, and in 1895, 1897, and 1905 they were also successful. Since the institution of the Football Association Cup Competition, in the season 1871, only two clubs have succeeded in winning the cup five times—the Wanderers, a famous amateur side now defunct—and the present prosperous club, Blackburn Rovers, who won it in 1883, 1884, 1885, 1889, and 1890. Until this season, Sunderland had never succeeded in winning their way into the cup final. In the League competition the club had won the League championship four times—once fewer than the Villa, who hold the record for number of wins.

Although the attendance of 90,000 on Saturday was enormous, and calculated to make followers of the Association code in Australia, who are used to small gatherings think furiously, it is by no means a record crowd for an Association match in England. When Tottenham met Sheffield United, at the Crystal Palace, 12 years ago, there were over 113,000 people present.

The collapse of a stand, and the injuries suffered by spectators, will be used as an argument by those who contend that the final tie of the Association Cup should not be played at Crystal Palace on account of the insufficiency of the stand accommodation. The natural banking at the Palace affords a splendid view for about 100,000 people, of course; but the seating accommodation is very meagre. The stands are old, and it is a wonder that an accident has not occurred earlier.

LIVERPOOL DOCKERS' STRIKE.

NEW R.M.S. NIAGARA.

DUE AT MELBOURNE TO-DAY.

The new 13,000-ton Royal mail steamer Niagara is due to arrive in Melbourne to-day on her maiden voyage from Glasgow. She is the latest addition to the fine fleet of steamers comprising the Canadian-Australasian line, and her arrival here on Thursday next should arouse wide interest. She was built by Messrs. John Brown and Co., Clydebank, and will be the largest and finest vessel of this fleet to take up the running between Australia and Vancouver. She is 543ft long and 66ft broad, and although principally designed for passengers will have large cargo space, much of which has been insulated for the carriage of frozen goods. She has accommodation for 281 first class, 210 second class, and 176 third class passengers. In the first class, staterooms have been provided for one, two, three, or four passengers, while several groups of cabins are arranged for family parties. There are two cabins de luxe on the shelter deck. The first class dining-room has accommodation for 190, and is decorated in Louis XVI. style, being situated on the upper deck amidships. An electric elevator runs between the main and promenade decks, and well-equipped library, writing, music, and smoking rooms are also provided. The new liner carries a steam launch for use when she is lying off certain intended ports of call. The various rooms on board are connected by telephone; and wireless telegraphy is, of course, installed. The Niagara is the first vessel burning oil fuel to have a British Board of Trade certificate for carrying passengers.

AUSTRALIAN WEATHER.

THE "HERALD" MAP.

The great high pressure system over Australia and the Southern Ocean still occupies the whole of the Tasman Sea and New Zealand, as well as the greater part of the continent. Its centre, if anything, has gained in barometric value over Tasmania, and exceeds [illegible] inches.

A peculiarity of this "high" is the series of waves it appears to have influenced during the past few days, without materially affecting the position or volume of the main body. The troughs of these waves, after causing unsettled, showery weather on the N.S.W. coast, have in each instance worked eastward over the Tasman Sea.

As at present situated, the high pressure and its attendant "dips" favour a return of unsettled conditions, with showers over eastern districts (including coast), and even parts of western districts, with squally south-east to north-east winds.

As shown by these depressions, monsoonal activity is still pronounced over western Queensland and the far north-west portion of the continent, where cloudy skies rule.

In the extreme south-west corner, an Antarctic disturbance has just made its appearance.

Ocean Forecasts.—Generally smooth to moderate; fresh around Leeuwin, passing southward.

LATE MR. J. R. DACEY.

A PEOPLE'S TRIBUTE.

UNVEILING A MEMORIAL.

"He was of the people, and for the people. . . . Erected by shilling subscriptions."

It is a fine tribute to the memory of a man who was esteemed by those with whom he came into personal contact. But it was a still finer tribute to see 400 men and women stand in the pouring rain yesterday afternoon at Yarra Cemetery when the State Premier unveiled the memorial stone erected to the late Mr. J. R. Dacey, State Treasurer in the M'Gowen Government.

Standing on an eminence directly overlooking the historic landing-place of Captain Cook, in which the late Minister was so much interested, the memorial is in a commanding position. The monument is a massive Maltese Cross, of red polished granite, of Celtic design, and is fixed on polished granite bases, resting on blue-stone sub-bases, with bluestone foundations. The ground is enclosed with bluestone kerbing.

The following inscription appears on the face of the cross and bases:—"Thy will be done. Sacred to the memory of the Honourable John Rowland Dacey, M.P., native of Co. Cork, Ireland. Died 11th April, 1912, aged [illegible] years. Eternal rest grant him, O Lord, and let perpetual light shine upon him. He was of the people, and for the people. Erected by shilling subscriptions. Unveiled by the Hon. J. S. T. M'Gowen, Premier of New South Wales."

Among those present, including the State Premier, were Mr. Horace Dacey (son), Mr. Simon Hickey, M.L.A. (son-in-law), and Mrs. Hickey, the Misses Gertie, Leonore, Dorothy, and Ita Dacey (daughters), and Master K. Dacey (son); Messrs. Holden, M.L.C. (Mayor of Redfern), Powell (Mayor of Waterloo), O'Riordan (Mayor of Alexandria), Chapman (Mayor of Mascot), Nielsen (Mayor of Botany), J. J. Cohen, M.L.A., and Houston ([illegible] Trust), J. M. Taylor (Public Service Board), Alderman D. M. Cooper, and a number of union representatives. Aldermen Leach and Donnellan, as chairman and secretary respectively of the memorial committee, were in charge of the proceedings.

Mr. M'Gowen, State Premier, unveiled the monument, saying, "May he live long in the memory of the people of New South Wales, and may his work honour him to the end of the chapter."

In the course of an address, Mr. M'Gowen paid an eloquent tribute to his late colleague. He said Mr. Dacey's whole life was given to the service of the people. His indomitable pluck and untiring energy had won for him the respect and confidence of the people. He had enjoyed that confidence as alderman, Mayor, member of Parliament, Cabinet Minister, and in innumerable other positions of trust and honour. He was always a tower of strength to any movement with which he was connected, and he (the Premier) and his party had suffered an irreparable loss when the strain of his long, ceaseless public services had cost him his life.

The Police Band, under Lieutenant [illegible], rendered the Dead March in "Saul" and the eventide setting of "Abide With Me."

Noticeable among the attendance were a number of military veterans from the Veterans' Home in which the late Minister always took a keen interest.

FINANCIAL.

REFERENDUM CRITICALLY CONSIDERED.

It is not often that we allow politics to intrude into this column. The referendum, however, has more than a purely political side. If carried in the affirmative it will affect every financial and business interest in the Commonwealth. It is, therefore, of paramount importance to each business man. It will touch his pocket, it will necessitate the recasting of his policy, possibly the rearrangement of his investments. We therefore purpose to subject these proposals to a critical analysis. The criticism will be divided into three parts. In this issue we shall state and classify the main arguments that can be used in favour of the referendum proposals of the Government, making out as strong a case as is possible. This will be followed by an equally strong case against the proposals, which will appear in our next issue, while on the third day we shall endeavour to reconcile the differences of opinion we have brought out, and to show that whatever variations in the Commonwealth Constitution may be desirable from a business point of view, for instance, by way of the establishment of a uniform company law can best be obtained, not by the present proposals, which are too wide, but by a slighter modification which preserves while in no way impairing the Federal principle. With these remarks we shall proceed to make out the best case possible in favour of the referendum. This may be done as follows:—

1. Once trade was a small, weak thing, confined to the limits of a retailer's shop. Now it is a mighty force that scorns frontiers and nationality.

2. The kind of legislative power that was potent enough to keep commerce within due bounds under the old system is utterly inadequate now.

3. The States, it is true, have plenary powers to deal with "combines," but what "combine" is there worthy of the name whose operations do not extend far beyond the borders of any State?

4. Outside the State it is outside the jurisdiction, and beyond the power, of mere State laws.

5. The Commonwealth Parliament is asking for no greater powers than are now possessed by the smallest State.

6. Should we be asked to believe that, though we can trust the people in their character of electors of the States, we must not trust the same people in their character as electors of the Commonwealth?

7. No new power is proposed to be created. All that is suggested is that the Federal Parliament shall be clothed with the same powers that the States now have, to be used only in case of need.

8. The Standard Oil Company already has its grip on Australia. Three-fourths of the oil we consume is from its refineries. Would it not be the height of folly for a single State to attack this giant trust when the whole force of the Commonwealth could be brought to bear?

9. Union is strength, so we are told, and certainly strength is needed to fight powerful trusts, some of which are said to have a fighting fund alone of several millions sterling.

10. The United States have never been able to deal adequately with "combines," because the central (that is, the Federal) Government has not, under the Constitution, power to grapple with the enemy. The States can do so, but they are too weak.

11. Our own Constitution was based on that of the United States, and we should allow ourselves to be taught by their experience, and make the necessary amendments while it is not yet too late.

12. It is urged that the referendum is a mere side track leading to unification. If that means a decrease in the cost of Government, will that not be a good thing for the average man?

13. We have seven Governors, 14 Legislative bodies, and all the trappings inevitably involved, and these to govern a mere four and a half million of law-abiding people.

14. Take a concrete case. We have six different company laws in force in the Commonwealth, whereas, if these referendum proposals are carried, the Federal Parliament will be enabled to pass a single Act for the whole continent.

15. Legislation in the future is certain to develop along the lines of industrialism. Why should there not be uniform laws dealing with this important subject for the whole of the Commonwealth?

16. The Federal Government should be the dominant Government, otherwise the part would be stronger than the whole, which is ridiculous.

AMERICAN-AUSTRALIAN MEAT CO.

A company is being formed under the laws of the State of Texas called the Gulf Meat and Produce Co. It has a capital of 1,000,000 dollars, in shares of one dollar each, whereof 10,000 fully paid-up shares are to be allowed to the promoter, and 990,000 are offered to the public for subscription, payable 20 cents on application and the balance in calls as required. This company is being formed for the purpose of importing frozen mutton, mainly from Australia, New Zealand, and other territory, to be sold in Texas or elsewhere, to wholesalers, butchers, and the public generally. Australia has well over one hundred million of sheep, from which this company will draw supplies. Two cents per pound the prospectus states, pays the grower for the mutton in good seasons; shipping charges, freight, insurance, and duty to be added, and the meat can be sold considerably under the current market prices. Frozen meat is no new departure, as Britain has been importing cargoes for many years, allowed in, from any country free of duty. If the United States duty be repealed the meat can be sold at one cent and one-half cheaper per pound. Meat will be imported in refrigerator steamers to Beaumont, Port Arthur, Houston, Galveston, or New Orleans, one or all of these ports, or any port, at the option of the directors, who will be elected by the shareholders. Existing cold storage facilities will be used at the start. Carcases are wrapped in cotton cloth, and, being frozen, will carry considerable distances by freight or express without injury. During a recent journey to Central America, Mr. Marshall saw opportunities for business in the Republics of Mexico, Guatemala, Salvador, Honduras, Nicaragua, Costa Rica, Panama, and the Canal Zone. The company would supply all these territories. Arthur Henry Marshall is promoting this company, and, as he has had great commercial experience in England and the U.S.A., besides having a thorough knowledge of the Australian meat trade, gained as office man and salesman in leading packing firms, the business will be conducted on safe lines, and the company should pay regular dividends. The company will be independent, and all the money subscribed will be used in the business with no outlay beyond the preliminary expenses.

AUSTRALIAN V. ARGENTINA IMMIGRATION.

It is well that we should watch Argentina. That country is our next direct competitor. It is progressing more rapidly than the Commonwealth. Its exports are much heavier than ours, and it is attracting more immigrants. Here are the figures for the two countries during the last five years:—

| | Net immigration into Australia. No. | | Argentina. No. |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1908 | 5,437 | .. | 170,298 |
| 1909 | 21,781 | .. | 136,440 |
| 1910 | 29,912 | .. | 191,786 |
| 1911 | 63,300 | .. | 105,068 |
| 1912 | 83,741 | .. | 203,143 |

Taking the gross return of immigrants into Argentina for 1912, these numbered 323,403; 142,460 leaving the country, including ordinary passengers. The nationalities of the immigrants were as follows:—Spaniards 165,662, Italians 80,583, Russians 20,632, Turks 19,792, Austrians 6,545, French 5,180, Portuguese 4,959, Greeks 3,375, English 3,184, the remainder various. The sex of the immigrants was as follows:—Men 214,356, boys 23,633, women 66,426, girls 18,988. The civil state comprised 202,059 single, 115,959 married, and 4386 widowed. Amongst the leading trades were:—Agriculturists 64,896, bricklayers 3015, carpenters 2616, cooks 7194, merchants 10,261, dressmakers 10,371, blacksmiths 1038, labourers 113,462, sailors 1963, mechanics 2046, milliners 2919, laundresses 6477, tailors 1273, servants 22,483, weavers 4913, shoemakers 1653.

THE EMPIRE IN FIGURES.

WHAT GREATER BRITAIN MEANS.

SOME INTERESTING FACTS.

GREAT PROGRESS LAST DECADE.

The Empire Trade Commission is with us. It is at present taking evidence in Sydney. But what is this Empire of ours? How few actually realise its magnitude. How many are aware that Great Britain and her possessions cover a territory of no less than 11,345,000 square miles, and that the number of people who owe allegiance to his Majesty King George is 417,148,000? Of this vast army the United Kingdom accounts for 45,216,665, India for 315,086,372, the Commonwealth of Australia 4,455,005, the Dominion of Canada 7,204,838, New Zealand 1,008,468, the Union of South Africa 5,973,394, and other possessions or protectorates 38,203,208. It is interesting to note the number of inhabitants per square mile in the various colonies. The 9th edition of the statistical abstract for the British Empire shows that in the United Kingdom every square mile supports 373 persons. The Isle of Man and Channel Islands are more crowded still with 491 persons per square mile, but here in Australia we may stretch our limbs in comfort, every man, woman and child having practically a whole square mile to him or herself. Canada has also plenty of room with a population of only 1.9 per square mile. Gibraltar is the most densely populated portion of the Empire. It carries 10,455 subjects per square mile, exclusive of the military. Contrary to the general impression, India has many empty spaces. There are only 177 people per square mile.

In the 10 years 1901 to 1911 the development in the trade and commerce of the empire has been most marked. The total foreign trade in 1901 was valued at £875,769,000: made up of £522,394,000 imports and £353,375,000 exports. In 1911 the imports had swollen to £732,904,000, and the exports to £619,638,000, or a total of £1,352,542,000. The inter-imperial trade has during the same period moved forwards £187,273,000 to £484,522,000. We are led to the conclusion, therefore, that the trade of the empire in 1911 was valued at £1,837,064,000.

The empire buys more from the United States than from any other foreign country. In 1911 the imports of American goods into the United Kingdom, its colonies, dominions, and protectorates were approximately worth £235,801,000. Germany came next amongst the suppliers of our wants, the shipments from that country being valued at £87,356,000. Then came France with £52,499,000, Russia with £43,870,000, Egypt with £28,261,000, and Argentine with £28,013,000. Our largest customers in 1911 were:—United States £104,972,000, Germany £96,642,000, France £64,376,000, Belgium £36,604,000, Japan £21,745,000, and Holland £22,510,000.

The following table showing the development in trade between the United Kingdom and the principal portions of the empire in the decade under review should prove interesting:—

Wheat-growing seems to have claimed a good deal of attention since 1901. In that year the total quantity of wheat produced in the Empire was 410,600,000 bushels, but in 1911 the output had moved forward to 788,700,000 bushels. British India contributed 425,901,660 bushels, the United Kingdom 64,313,452 bushels, and Australia 71,866,317 bushels. Nor has the wool industry been neglected. The Commonwealth produced in 1901 543,131,661lb of wool, but in 1911 the returns showed the production to be 766,808,667lb. The exports of wool from British India by land and sea in 1911 were 53,138,854lb, as compared with 19,651,700lb in 1901.

The Transvaal is by far the greatest gold-producing part of the Empire, and, indeed, of the world. The value of its output in 1911 was no less than £35,041,485. The Commonwealth came next with £10,551,624. Southern Rhodesia third was £2,647,895, India fourth with £2,238,143, and Canada fifth with £2,010,555.

The production within the Empire of other leading raw products is enormous, but is still rapidly increasing. The following table, which compares the output in 1911 of the several staple products mentioned with that of 1901, makes this abundantly clear:—

| | 1901. | | 1911. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Barley, bushels ........ | 96,000,000 | .. | 117,500,000 |
| Oats, bushels ........ | 267,100,000 | .. | 550,500,000 |
| Maize, bushels ........ | 30,800,000 | .. | 31,900,000 |
| Wine, gallons ........ | 9,800,000 | .. | 6,500,000 |
| Tea, lb ........ | 338,402,000 | .. | 455,600,000 |
| Cocoa, lb ........ | 54,072,000 | .. | 181,589,000 |
| Coffee, lb ........ | 35,840,000 | .. | 36,788,000 |
| Raw sugar, tons ........ | 2,700,000 | .. | 3,055,000 |
| Rubber, lb ........ | 5,063,000 | .. | 37,780,000 |
| Cotton, lb ........ | 1,009,252,000 | .. | 1,279,616,000 |
| Coal, tons ........ | 241,105,000 | .. | 314,826,000 |
| Pig iron, tons ........ | 8,174,000 | .. | 10,282,000 |
| Silver, £ ........ | 1,091,000 | .. | 4,338,000 |
| Copper, £ ........ | 4,129,000 | .. | 4,636,000 |
| Tin, £ ........ | 6,600,000 | .. | 11,160,000 |

All these facts clearly illustrate the magnitude of the commercial and industrial activities of the Empire, and it is quite natural that the volume of letters passing to and fro between the various portions of the Empire and foreign countries should run into hundreds of millions. Here are some of the principal figures for letters and postal cards. The year 1910 is compared with 1901:—

| | 1901. | | 1910. |
|---|---|---|---|
| British India ........ | 409,200,492 | .. | 899,309,872 |
| Australia ........ | 220,177,642 | .. | 392,850,662 |
| Canada ........ | 224,850,000 | .. | 526,020,500 |
| New Zealand ........ | 54,090,987 | .. | 210,450,638 |
| Transvaal ........ | 8,863,982 | .. | 38,368,315 |
| Rhodesia ........ | 2,178,780 | .. | 7,841,652 |
| Ceylon ........ | 16,535,128 | .. | 28,154,093 |

In 1910 British India had 72,746 miles of telegraph lines, Australia 43,492 miles, Canada 36,517, New Zealand 11,316, Cape Colony 8466, Rhodesia 4404, and Nigeria 6489 miles. Railway mileage also shows considerable expansion. In 1896 the total mileage of the Empire was 54,528 miles: in 1910 it had grown to 91,029 miles. Some of the principal figures are:—

| | 1910. Miles. | | 1896. Miles. |
|---|---|---|---|
| British India ........ | 32,099 | .. | 20,114 |
| Canada ........ | 25,780 | .. | 16,270 |
| Australia ........ | 17,248 | .. | 11,665 |
| New Zealand ........ | 2,782 | .. | 2,185 |
| Union of South Africa ........ | 7,596 | .. | 2,900 |
| Rhodesia ........ | 2,193 | .. | 96 |

The question is often asked, "What position does Sydney hold amongst the great cities of the Empire?" The correct answer in point of population is eighth, London comes first with 4,519,754, Bombay second with 972,445, Calcutta third with 896,067, Birmingham fourth with 850,947, Glasgow fifth with 785,600, Liverpool sixth with 752,021, Manchester seventh with 723,531, and Sydney eighth with 651,800. Melbourne is ninth with 600,160. It is singular that Montreal, the largest city in Canada, carries a population of only 470,480.

COMMERCIAL.

NEW COTTON FIELDS FOR THE EMPIRE.

The Royal Commission on Empire Trade has inquired closely into the possibilities of cotton growing in Australia. In seeking for new fields of cotton culture it is the aim of the British manufacturers to render Great Britain less dependent on the American supply, and this aim is being heartily seconded by the British Government. The reference in the King's speech at the opening of Parliament, to "a guarantee from the Imperial Exchequer of a loan by the Government of the Soudan for insuring the prosperity of that territory and the development therein of the industry of cotton-growing" brings to mind (writes the "Financial Times") the important deputation from the British Cotton Growing Association to the Prime Minister in January last with a view to calling the attention of the Imperial Government to the need for additional railways and irrigation works in the Soudan and for direct financial assistance in connection with the advancement of the cotton growing industry. As a result of the discussion which then took place the Imperial Government agreed to extend for a further period of three years the grant of £10,000 per annum made to the Cotton Growing Association for this purpose during the past quinquennium. The scheme to which his Majesty referred is, however, of a far wider scope. The total amount of money which it is proposed to raise for the purpose in view can hardly be stated definitely at present, but it will be very large, and will be raised as it is required. The intention is to bring under cotton cultivation a vast area representing many millions of acres which have not been fertile during any period on record, no matter how distant, and to this end it will be necessary to construct irrigation works on a very comprehensive scale and also to create a system of light railways, while a scheme of settlement will also have to be introduced. The entire project will take some years to complete, but it is believed that the arid wastes of the Soudan will eventually be turned into a source of vast wealth to the empire generally, and it is quite possible that in future years the reference to this matter recently by King George will prove to have been his most momentous utterance in opening the present session of Parliament. The principal cotton interests in Great Britain will have an opportunity of advising on the details of the project, and they doubtless will be more than willing to lend their assistance to an enterprise which means so much to Lancashire.

SCULLING.

PARRAMATTA CLUB.

CHARLES TOWNS STATE CHAMPION.

The finals and State championship of the Parramatta River Professional Sculling Club regatta were rowed on Saturday. The large ferry steamers Bronzewing and Kookooburra carried a rather limited number of persons, a band, and the referee, H. Floyd, and the timekeepers, Messrs. A. Hart and H. Westhoff. Charles Towns won the State sculling championship, and becomes first holder of the Angus-Coote trophy. He rowed a clever race, but Ripley also made a good showing. Pat Hannan, a young New Zealander, who is being coached in sculling by George Towns, won the best boats handicap rather easily, and A. Mantova secured first place in the pleasure skiffs handicap. There was a fairly strong breeze from the south and a flood tide, both conditions being against the outrigger races. H. Floyd was referee, J. M'Gregor and J. W. Scott starters, and N. J. M'Donald and D. Glover judges. Results:—

Harry Goggin, from the Tweed River, was unable to start owing to illness. The five scullers got away shortly after 4 p.m., the tide then being about an hour's flood. Pearce dashed away at a great pace, and led Towns half a length after they had rowed a dozen strokes. They were well out in the tide, but Ripley, who was well sheltered from wind and tide under the southern bank, came with a rush, rowing a fast but irregular stroke. Passing the jetty, which nearly marks the quarter-mile mark, Ripley was over a length in front of Pearce, with Towns another length away, followed by Jack and M'Devitt. The scullers had now to race across Bray's Bay for the mile mark, on Blaxland Point. There was no shelter, and the tide had a bit of a twist in it. At half-way Pearce was dropping behind, and soon Ripley was in front, with Towns a length away; but the latter had steadied down to a slow, swinging stroke, while Ripley already had to spurt to hold his place. At the mile Towns, who had used his head in regard to the tide, was a length and a half to the good, his time being 7m 21s. Ripley was about four or five lengths away, leading Pearce, who had recovered himself a little, but he now had to face a new trouble, for M'Devitt was going well, and thence rowed a great race on even terms. Putney (1½m) was reached by Towns in 11m 13s, and he had a lead of three lengths from Ripley. The leader wisely crossed the river to the gas works, dodging the full strength of the tide, thus gaining good headway. Ripley seemed to rely on a frequent series of spurts, but Towns made no response. Jack gave up before Putney was reached, as he had another race to row and no chance in this. Passing Cabarita Towns was timed at 17m 19s, and he was holding a comfortable lead from Ripley, and a long way behind came M'Devitt, who had a good length from Pearce.

Three-quarters of a mile still to go, and Ripley continued his short spurts, but Towns maintained his lead. Passing along Abbotsford there was better water, and passing the place where One Man Wharf once jutted out Towns's time was 21m 11s. The same old struggle was going on between M'Devitt and Pearce, and most interest was centred on this part of the race. Towns rowed to the judges' line in 24m 59s, with a lead of three lengths from Ripley. M'Devitt looked like finishing third, but with a few terrific strokes Pearce drew level, and M'Devitt fell out of his boat before reaching the finish.

Non-starters were S. Pearce (ser) and C. Matterson (15s). The race needs little description, for Mantova led all the way. He was pressed by Starr at the half-distance, but not for long. Bailey forced Pearce off his proper course, and both lost all chance in consequence. Time was 8m 34s. It would have been advantageous had the judge taken up a better line at the finish. A study of the course would have suggested this.

Others starters: G. Jack and S. Pearce. The tide was very troublesome, and the rowers spread all over the river to avoid it as much as possible. Pearce made no headway, being tired from his previous effort. Hannan won easily by six lengths in 15m 27s, and Matterson beat Towns a half-length for second place. Towns's course was criticised by many on the steamer, but he was directed by the most capable man on the steamer—his brother. The arrangements were satisfactory, and the sport good, although the programme was too lengthy to warrant so late a start from town.

MINING.

THE WEEK'S OPERATIONS.

CARPATHIAS BOOMING.

A BIG MORNING'S BUSINESS.

The past week has been notable for the extreme popularity of certain local stocks and the sharp fall which has taken place in metal values, and the corresponding depression of the values of lead and copper stocks. Towards the end of the previous week the metal market was exceedingly buoyant. Lead and copper values rose steadily, and as a consequence there was an all-round firming in shares belonging to lead and copper mines. Towards the middle of last week, however, the reaction came. The pendulum commenced to swing back, and copper values fell steadily. The fall of lead was not rapid at first, but on Saturday the cabled advices showed that it had slumped completely, the fall notified being no less than £1 per ton. The same advices brought to hand the news that copper was inclined to recover, but the rise was small, and it had no effect on the market.

The most popular stocks in the copper section during the week were Hampdens and Lloyds. The lastnamed mine was specially favoured early in the week, but shares values seemed to reach their zenith at 6/6. Since touching that mark they have declined steadily, and the best offer on Saturday was 5/7. Hampdens eased considerably. The fall in prices came very suddenly, but it is attributable solely to market operations. Mount Lyells, Mount Morgans, Wallaroos, and Mount Elliotts, remained fairly steady. There was, however, no marked anxiety on the part of speculators to deal in the stocks.

The market for Barriers gradually declined, and at the end of the week it was weak and depressed. Here, again, the influence of the unsteady metal market was distinctly shown. The labour troubles also at Broken Hill, and the uncertainty existing with regard to them, had a marked effect on the shares. Taking everything into consideration it is a good omen and shows the faith the speculating public have in the field when values have been maintained as well as they have.

The most sensational development in connection with the Barrier field was the rapid rise in Radium Hill shares. The mine, it is true, does not belong to the Barrier group in the strict sense of the word, but its proximity to Broken Hill in a measure places it in the general category of mines there. The movement in connection with the shares is the result of the attention which the ore produced has been attracting, and the possibility of important developments in the near future.

The Ardlethan field put all others into the shade. At the beginning of the week dealings in Carpathias and kindred stock were quiet, but interest in the mines developed as the week advanced and culminated on Saturday in the shares touching the highest point which they have yet reached, namely 19/1½ and 19/3.

On Saturday morning Brokens had the busiest week-end morning which they have experienced this year. The Ardlethan mines were responsible for the boom.

Carpathias were eagerly sought after. On 'Change forward sales were made at 18/6, but heavy buying orders came to hand, and by noon sellers were asking and getting 19/1½ for cash sales, and 19/3 for forward delivery. The number of shares dealt in was very large. Throughout the morning parcels changed hands rapidly, and by 12 o'clock nearly 3000 shares had been operated on.

White Crystals, an unlisted Ardlethan stock, were dealt in largely. Shares opened at 15/9, and buyers proved so eager for them that values were advanced steadily up to 16/9. Throughout the morning over 1000 shares were handled. Both Carpathias and White Crystals closed firm, holders of the latter stock asking 17/ and more, when business finished. Homeward Bound, another stock belonging to the same field, was also firm at higher prices.

Copper stocks were in slightly better favour, and sales of Hampdens, Mount Elliotts, Mount Morgans, and Wallaroos were made at firm prices.

Barriers continued depressed, the prices offering in almost every case being a shade lower than the previous day's closing quotations.

The sales of Barriers included Proprietaries, Junctions, and South (contg.). Junctions were the only shares to bring recent figures, the others being cleared at a little less than recent buying prices.

Mount Oxides were again in the market, and sold at £50/10/ for cash and £51 forward.

MINING NOTES.

Mr. H. C. Bellingen left for Australia, via America, on April 11, to take up the position of general manager of the Great Cobar Company for a further term.

The Broken Hill Proprietary Company is in receipt of a cable from London, under date of April 17, giving the following metal quotations:—Silver, 2/3¾; lead, £18/10/; spelter, £25/10/; copper, £69/2/6.

Attached to the report of the Ivanhoe Company, Western Australia, which has just come to hand, is a report prepared by the consulting engineers to the company, dealing with the ore reserves of the mine. It shows that the total estimated tonnage of the reserves is 1,082,595 tons. The average value per ton is set down at 40/5, or a total value of £2,201,800. In view of the report it has been deemed advisable to reduce the monthly profit to £14,000. The reduction will take effect from the present month.

Important news has come to hand with regard to the Hercules mine on the west coast of Tasmania. A good deal of interest has been created in the affairs of the company owing to the dissensions which existed with regard to the management of the mine and its development. Mr. Blakemore, who was engaged to report upon the mine, has handed his estimate on the ore reserves to the directors. The precis of the report telegraphed conveys no information with regard to Mr. Blakemore's general observations. One thing, however, seems almost certain, and that is the amalgamation of the Hercules, Primrose, and Tasmanian Smelting Company. Such a consummation would be heartily welcomed throughout the island State, as it would assure to the smelting company regular supplies of ore for treatment.

The output of the Hercules Company, Tasmania, for the week ended April 14 was 645 tons of sulphide ore.

HERCULES MINE.

ITS ORE RESERVES.

LAUNCESTON, Saturday.

Mr. G. H. Blakemore's report on the Hercules mine was circulated to-day. He says the tonnage of ore available is difficult to arrive at, because of the woful lack of development. He estimates that there are 110,000 tons of ore below the No. 4 level to a depth of 47ft. He is satisfied that good ore will be obtained by driving north from No. 5 "B" crosscut, and says that this work is the most important part of the future development of the mine.

The directors say there is a considerable difference between Mr. Blakemore's estimate of the ore reserves and that of the mine manager, and point out that his estimate is admittedly conservative. Mr. Blakemore's report on the Tasmanian Smelting Company's works is satisfactory. The directors also say that Mr. Morse's report on German processes of treatment is shortly expected, and, if satisfactory, proposals for amalgamation with the Primrose and Tasmanian smelters will be at once formulated.

QUEENSLAND MINING YIELD.

BRISBANE, Sunday.

The mining returns, other than gold, coal, or precious stones, for the quarter ended March 31, show a large increase over the March quarter of last year, the figures being £536,537, against £325,420, an increase of £211,117. The principal increase is in copper, which is of the value of £439,373, as against £224,120, in the corresponding quarter of last year. Silver shows an increase, being £12,664, as against £6319.

POLICE COURTS.

FINED FOR UNDERSIZED FISH.

W. E. Philip, of Maclean, New South Wales, was proceeded against by summons at the Water Police Court by Senior-sergeant Mitchell (for the State Fisheries Department) for consigning for sale river garfish of a less length than 8¼in, the length prescribed by the Fisheries regulations. Mr. Robison appeared for complainant.

The evidence showed that defendant consigned two bushels of the undersized fish to Sydney. The fish varied in length from 5½in to 7in, instead of being at least 8¼in long.

Defendant pleaded guilty, and, as it was his first offence, he was only fined £2, with 6s costs.

MILK PROSECUTION.

Xenophon Nickolas, of the firm of Nockolas and Aroney, Queen Victoria Markets, was fined £2, or in default a month's imprisonment, for having sold milk deficient in fat.

At the Central Summons Court Margaret Cross, proprietress of dining rooms in Bathurst-street, was fined £5, or a month's imprisonment, for selling milk deficient in milk fat.

SHOP LIFTING.

At the Central Police Court, Austin Clay Hannel, 30, for stealing a watch and chain, valued at £2 10s, belonging to David Jones, Ltd., George-street, was fined £2, in default a month's imprisonment.

For stealing 33½ yards of material, valued at 82s 6d, the property of Riley Bros., on Friday last, Richard Wilks was sentenced to three months' imprisonment.

CHIDLEY FINED.

At the Central Summons Court, William James Chidley was fined £3 for sending an indecent publication through the post.

Mr. Love, who had reserved his decision at the last hearing of the summons, said he had looked through the book complained of, and, although it might have been written with the best of intentions, that was no concern of his. His duty was to say whether it was an indecent publication or not. In his opinion, it was indecent. There was a penalty of £100 provided for the offence, or in default two years' imprisonment. Defendant would be fined £3, or in default 14 days' imprisonment.

Fourteen days were allowed in which to pay the fine, as defendant's solicitor intimated that as it was a test case he intended to take it to a higher Court.

SEAMEN SENT TO GAOL.

At the Water Police Court, before Mr. G. H. Smithers, S.M., Frederick Bernard Newman, 35, Charles Sharp, 38, and Gordon Warpole, 28, seamen on board the steamer Minmi, were charged with embezzling cargo on that vessel between January 17 and March 22, 1913. The property was valued at £33.

Each defendant pleaded guilty, and was sentenced to three months' hard labour. Warpole was ordered to pay £5 8s 4d, Sharp £3 5s, and Newman £4 15s from their wages due, as compensation to the master of the vessel for the loss sustained.

CARRIAGE OF EXPLOSIVES.

The Explosives Act provides that special licensed carts must be used for the carriage of large quantities of explosives through the streets. Unlicensed vehicles are allowed to carry explosives when not in excess of 100lb.

George Stanley Littlejohn, representing the firm of Scott, Henderson, and Co., was last week proceeded against by summons at the Water Police Court by Norman Hervey Case (explosives department), for aiding and abetting in the carriage of more than 100lb of explosives.

Mr. Robinson appeared for complainant, and Mr. W. M. Vindin for the defence. Defendant pleaded guilty. Evidence was given that a carter employed by defendants conveyed 157lb of explosives to Darling Harbour on an unlicensed van. It was stated that defendant had no personal knowledge of the transaction, as the explosives were handed to the carter by an employee.

Defendant was fined £2, with 6s costs, in default 14 days' hard labour.

THE TEST OF TIME.

Father Time is the great revealer of all shams. Sooner or later he exposes the false and the make-believe. Only the things that are true and real can survive the test of time. Year after year, decade after decade, Beecham's Pills have been the one and only household medicine in many thousands of homes. In city and in hamlet alike, they have been equally appreciated. And their popularity to-day is greater than ever. They have emerged triumphant from the trying test of time. This is because they are really efficacious in doing what they claim to do. What they promise they perform. They are a true remedy and a very real relief in all cases of indigestion, biliousness, constipation, sluggish action of the Kidneys, and the nervous troubles resulting from these conditions. Hence they exert a corrective and curative action upon the whole system. # IN ANTARCTICA.

MAWSON EXPEDITION.

THE GEOLOGICAL RESULTS.

COAL AND OTHER MINERALS.

The coalfield discovered in Antarctica is of the greatest scientific interest, and may prove of economic value. Other minerals, commonly of economic value, were discovered by the Mawson expedition. Professor David, in the following statement, summarises in a popular manner the geological results of the investigations.

The science of geology, he says, was particularly well represented in the personnel of Dr. Mawson's Australasian expedition to Antarctica. Dr. Mawson himself has been professionally trained at the University of Sydney as a geologist and mining engineer, and besides contributing important papers on the geology of the New Hebrides, as well as on that of the Ross Sea region of Antarctica examined by the Shackleton expedition, he has finished an able paper on the metalliferous deposits of Broken Hill and their mode of origin. He will write up part of the geology of this region when he returns—it is hoped early next year. With Dr. Mawson at his main base, geology was further represented by Mr. F. L. Stillwell, M.Sc., of the University of Melbourne. At Frank Wild's base, 1300 miles to the west of Adelie Land, there were two geologists, Mr. A. D. Watson, B.Sc., and Mr. C. A. Hoadley, M.Sc. These last three geologists have already furnished a preliminary report, which may be summarised as follows:—

Adelie Land, for the most part, consists of a huge ice-covered plateau, rising rather sharply from the coastline to a height inland of a little over 7000ft. At Commonwealth Bay, Dr. Mawson's headquarters, a beautiful natural boat harbour is formed by outcrops of very ancient schistose and gneissic rocks. These rise inland in low hills, usually not more than 120ft above sea level. To the east and west of Commonwealth Bay, the rock outcrops are few and far between, with the exception of a very important high bluff discovered by Mr. C. T. Madigan, B.Sc., of Adelaide University. Madigan's party found that this bluff terminated seawards in a cliff about 1000ft high. The upper 600ft was formed of a blackish blue metal type of rock, perhaps an old lava, while the lower 400ft was composed of horizontally bedded sandstones, with bands of black, coaley shale, with remains of fossil plants imperfectly preserved. Nevertheless, there can be little doubt that this formation is part of the great antarctic coalfield, which has now been proved to extend all the way, practically from the South Pole to this point, Dreadnought Bluff, 260 miles east of Commonwealth Bay. That is, for a total distance of no less than 1500 miles. It has not yet been certainly demonstrated that the coal in this vast field is of commercial value, but the seams discovered by Shackleton and Frank Wild near the head of the Beardmore Glacier, 350 miles north of the South Pole, yielded lumps of coal, which when tested in Sydney, proved to be of workable quality.

It was not possible in the short time available to obtain average samples throughout the whole thickness of the seams, the thickness varying from 3ft to 7ft. This discovery, reported by Mr. Stillwell, is of great scientific interest, and may later prove of economic value.

STIBNITE AND MOLYBDENITE.

His report states that within 100 yards of Dr. Mawson's main hut the interesting discovery was made of traces of at least three minerals commonly of economic value. It was found that in places the pebbles of the glacial moraines were partly coated with green and blue carbonates of copper, and these copper carbonates were traced to an outcrop of rock in situ present in quartz veins. Small streaks and seams of the sulphide of antimony, known as stibnite, were found in a loose block of quartz in the moraine. The most interesting discovery of all was that of numerous small metallic plates of molybdenite, also in quartz rock, and actually in situ close to the hut. This was partly coated with a yellow crust of the oxide. It occurred in lenticular veins traversing the old crystalline rocks. The present market value of molybdenite is about £220 per ton, and the mineral, which is much in demand for the manufacture chiefly of molybdic steel, has hitherto proved a distinctly scarce product of the earth's crust. This discovery, therefore, is the most promising that had hitherto been made, as the indications of minerals of commercial value, other than coal in Antarctica.

EMERALDS FOUND.

In regard to non-metallic minerals, Dr. Mawson's main base is especially rich. Red garnets are particularly numerous, lumps of this mineral occurring up to at least six inches in diameter. I n addittion, large black crystals of mineral tourmaline, certainly boracic acid and generally associated with tinned stone are of very common occurrence, but hitherto tinned stone itself has not been found at this spot. Another mineral which is often of considerable commercial value is the beryl, which, when translucent and of a fine green colour becomes the gem emerald. These crystals of beryl occurred in quartz veins in situ again close to the hut. The crystals were from half an inch in diameter, and about two inches in length, and mostly they were of a bluish-green tint. Some of them were sufficiently translucent and green to term emeralds. It will thus be seen that Dr. Mawson's headquarters were most fortunately placed from the point of view of the occurrence of many minerals interesting scientifically, and commercially. The chief limitation to this important area is that the amount of rock exposed is only about half a square mile, which does not, of course, afford great scope for prospecting.

COASTAL SURVEY.

The final results of the geographical exploration at Frank Wild's base have been to add a new coastline of 230 miles in a beeline east to west to the map of the Antarctic continent, teogther with a number of newly discovered islands. All these have now been accurately charted. The work of charting to the east of Wild's hut was in charge of Mr. A. L. Kennedy, of Adelaide University, and the western area was in charge of Mr. Dovers. As throughout the whole distance the land has been proved to rest on a rock foundation, this work will be a permanent contribution to science for all time.

INSECT PESTS.

PARASITES FOR ALL.

MEDITERRANEAN FRUIT FLY.

One of the most serious insect pests in Hawaii is the Mediterranean fruit fly. It is a bad enough pest here, but it is far worse in that tropical group, because in hot climates the propagation of the species goes on all the year round, whereas in temperate zones the fly multiplies only during the summer months, and remains practically dormant during the winter. The pest was introduced into Hawaii only a few years ago, and suspicion, it appears, falls upon Australia as the country of origin.

All sorts of artificial means to keep the fly in check having failed, the Hawaiian Government decided to commission Dr. Filippo Silvestri, Professor of General and Agricultural Zoology at the Royal College of Agriculture at Portici, Italy, who has a world-wide reputation as an entomologist, to go in quest of a natural enemy of the fly, and he has succeeded in discovering five specimens of parasites that attack either the eggs of the pest or the fly itself. These he found in West Africa.

For eight months, Dr. Silvestri, who arrived in Sydney yesterday, prosecuted his search in Senegal, through French Guinea, the Gold Coast, Dahomey, Nigeria, the Cameroons, Congo, and Angola, being right in the depths of the jungles most of the time. It was dangerous work, for yellow fever and malaria are rampant in those regions, but he came through safe and sound and triumphant. West Africa is, he says, the original home of what is incorrectly termed the Mediterranean fly, which has found its way to almost every part of the world, except the United States, which owing to the severe laws that have long been in operation there, has so far been kept free from it. He is now en route to Hawaii with his precious parasites, which he believes will be of benefit to all growers affected by this insect nuisance, and he intends to leave some specimens with the New South Wales Government Entomologist free of cost to see whether they can be acclimatised.

He has also brought with him two species of what he believes are parasites of the common house fly, with which he is going to experiment for the first time in Hawaii.

SPORTING.

THE TURF.

Those owners who intend nominating for the Newcastle Cup of 1000 sovs to be run over a mile and three furlongs at the Newcastle Jockey Club's meeting on May 17, should note that nominations, accompanied by the entrance fee (one sovereign), must be in the hands of the secretary, Mr. J. Grisdale, to-day. The first acceptance fee of one sovereign is due on the 12th prox., while the final acceptance fee of four sovereigns is payable at scale.

The programme of the Rosehill Racing Club to be run through on the 3rd prox., requires the attention of horse owners and trainers to-day, for at 4 p.m. entries close with the secretary, Mr. G. W. S. Rowe.

Up to 5 p.m. to-day the secretary, Mr. Underhill, will receive entries for the seven events to be contested at the second day's racing of the Rosebery Club's double-barrelled meeting on Saturday next.

The rain during the past week has been very heavy on the South Coast, and the Kembla Grange course has suffered considerably. The committee of the club paid a visit of inspection to the course yesterday and came to the conclusion that the course would not be in a fit state for the cup meeting to-morrow. They therefore postponed the meeting for a week.

Mr. Harvey Roulston, chief stipendiary steward to the Calcutta Turf Club, is paying his annual visit to Sydney after a strenuous season in India. He intends to remain in the Comonwealth a couple of months.

Mr. H. B. Dando will receive entries at the office of the Warwick Farm Club up to 4 p.m. to-day for the Goulburn Racing Club's meeting on May 1 and 2.

The N.S.W. Trotting Club will claim the attention of trotting enthusiasts to-day at Epping Racecourse, Glebe. A splendid programme has been arranged, and the entries are good, there being 73 for the five events.

Messrs. Wm. Inglis and Son will offer the following racehorses for sale at their bazaar at noon to-day:—Wangajong, Easy Money, First Home, Shandy, Shot Tower, and Ind Coope.

Messrs. H. Chisholm will hold a sale of racehorses at their Randwick stables at 3 p.m. to-day, when among the lots offered will be Debutante, and b. g., 2 years, by Abundance—Flight, br. f., one year, by Developer (imp.)—Molly Lee.

MOOREFIELD RACING CLUB.

DIPLOMATIST WINS FLYING HANDICAP.

HARLEY MOOREFIELD HANDICAP.

In dull but fine weather the April meeting of the Moorefield Racing Club was held on Saturday, and as the result of there being no opposition from the pony clubs, there was an unusually large gathering to witness the sport. The track was sound, though the recent rain had made it a trifle holding, and the racing was got through devoid of accident, with the exception of a harmless fall in the hurdle race. The stipendiary stewards were called on to decide a protest lodged by the owner of Cacique in the Juvenile Handicap against the winner, Tofua, the allegation being that his trainer had trained horses running in all height races at the unregistered meetings. The protest, however, was dismissed. Business in the betting market was brisk, but it was an unprofitable day for most backers, as three outsiders caught the judge's eye. Results:—

At the next furlong, Blast joined Hot Air and they were followed a length away by Debutante, with Diplomatist and Salarino next. ## GOLF.

A.G.C. v R.S.G.C.

CLUB COMPETITIONS.

The first of the season's matches between the two metropolitan clubs was played on Saturday at Kensington, when, after a closely contested match, Royal Sydney were returned the winners by the narrow margin of one, the scores being 5 to 4 in their favour. The Australian Club was unfortunate in having J. D. Howden absent, owing to illness. E. L. Apperly beat J. S. Marks, of Royal Sydney, by 8 up and 6, but with this exception the play was very even, and none of the other wins was of a runaway nature.

Manly opened its annual autumn meeting with a bogey handicap, open to members of all recognised clubs, and had a fair entry. The winner, H. G. V. Adler, who finished 1 up, was the only player to beat bogey. Drummoyne opened the season with driving, approaching, and putting competitions. The usual club competitions were held.

Results were as follow:—

POLO.

SYDNEY CLUB AT KENSINGTON.

There was a good roll up from the Sydney Polo Club at the Kensington Racecourse on Saturday afternoon, when interesting practice was witnessed by a large gathering. The ground was in splendid order after the recent rains, and both the players and the ponies seemed to be in better form than shown earlier in the season.

Mr. B. Richards, who has just recommenced play, showed flashes of his old brilliancy, and Mr. Colin Stephen and Mr. T. Watson also played excellently. The latter took the ball from one end of the ground to the other, and drove it with three powerful hits through the goal posts. Good form was also exhibited by Mr. D. Garvan and Captain Talbot, A.D.C.

There was a large assemblage of ladies, and among those present were Miss Lily Brayton, Mrs. A. Turnbull, Mrs. Colin Stephen, Mrs. Hanbury Davies, the Misses Cope, J. Knox, Clare Garvan, D. Danger, Lee Dowling, and Lumsdaine. The members of the club entertained the visitors at afternoon tea.

COURSING.

KENSINGTON CLUB.

On Saturday several members of the committee of the Kensington Coursing Club met on the course. Several trials with the hares were not satisfactory, and as a consequence it has been decided to abandon the meeting which had been arranged for Thursday and Friday next. Nominators for the various stakes will be refunded the entrance fees which they have paid.

CYCLING AND MOTORING.

MOTOR YACHT CLUB.

A fine race and a good finish were the outcome of the Motor Yacht Club's handicap for boats of a speed over 10 miles an hour on Saturday afternoon. The race was from Rose Bay to the Pile Light and back, about four and a half miles, and eight boats started. N.T.B. and Tu Tu were the only two that lost no time at the start. When the boats were sighted coming back, N.T.B. was leading, but was quickly passed by Nerangbi. The latter was going great guns, when, close to the buoy in Rose Bay her engine "seized up," and threw her out of the race. Rounding the buoy, Tu Tu, N.T.B., and X.Q.Q. Me were practically together, but the former drew away from X.Q.Q. Me in the final flutter, and won by eight seconds. Result:—

Tu Tu (Mr. W. H. Mason), started at 3.15.15, finished 3.58.20. Time, 43m 5s .... 1
X.Q.Q. Me (Messrs. Harvey and Taylor), started 3.45, finished 3.58.28. Time, 13m 28s .... 2
N.T.B. (Mr. E. C. Griffith), started 3.35, finished 3.58.40. Time, 23m 40s .... 3
Erindi (Mr. E. Mortimer), started 3.38.30, finished 4.5.10. Time, 31m 40s.

Billiken, Ottawa, and Wogibeh, as well as Nerangbi, failed to finish.

In the evening a successful social was held at the club's bungalow, Rose Bay, Mr. W. E. Hart, the Australian aviator, being among the guests. Mr. E. C. ## BOWLS.

THE RAWSON CUP.

SATURDAY'S PLAY.

There were two features in Saturday's bowling programme. First, the initial round of the Rawson trophy competition was played, with the result that Ashfield, Ryde, Victoria Park, Manly, Randwick, Strathfield, and Kuring-gai were defeated, and will now drop out under the "sudden death" principle. The second feature was that the country clubs settled the question as to who will represent the country districts in the final round of the "B" pennant competition, when Orange proved successful by defeating Goulburn. The victors will now take part in the semi-final games with City, Ryde, and Mosman. It is proposed to play these matches on Saturday next.

In addition to the foregoing a number of inter-club matches were played. Several of the metropolitan clubs sent teams to the Newcastle district. This interchange of visits between metropolitan and country clubs is becoming popular.

THE RAWSON CUP.

The first round for the Rawson Cup contest was played on Saturday. The trophy must be won by a metropolitan club three times before it becomes its absolute property. Several clubs have won it on two occasions. Owing to the "sudden death" principle governing the competition, it will not take long to finish it. Ten clubs had byes on Saturday, and these will be drawn against the winners of Saturday in the second round of the contest, which will be played next Saturday. In order that the semi-final round of the "B" pennant might also take place next Saturday it was decided that North Sydney and Ryde, who were drawn against each other in the second round of the Rawson Cup, should play last Saturday, and if Ryde lost then the "B" contest could proceed next Saturday. As Ryde were defeated there will be no difficulty in both the Rawson and "B" contests running side by side.

Considerable interest was taken in the match between Ashfield, champion club of New South Wales, and Chatswood, who were competitors in the semi-final of the State championship. However, Chatswood proved too good for the champions on this occasion, and beat them by 91 to 74. The following are the details of Saturday's play:—

LAWN TENNIS.

INTERCLUB COMPETITIONS.

Saturday was one of those days that are unsatisfactory to tennis players—fine overhead and wet underfoot. The rain of the preceding night had been heavier in some places than others, and its effect varied with the nature of the different courts. Consequently a good deal of uncertainty existed as to whether matches would be played. Several contests were played off, sometimes with the aid of substitutes for regular members of the teams who had not put in an appearance, but the majority were postponed.

Only two matches were contested in A grade, both of them taking place on the Strathfield courts. The remaining three, all set down for Double Bay, were held over. Strathfield I. maintained its undefeated record, the No. 3 team of the same club being unable to take a set. Strathfield II. and Manly were much more evenly matched. They were level in sets when four and six had been played, Manly having a lead of three games at the latter stage. Then Barton and Kent won a love set from Baker and Cole, which gave Strathfield II. a lead of 1 set 3 games. As the light was then very bad, the finish was postponed. Results:—

LACROSSE.

Practice games were played on Saturday by the majority of clubs. Many players, being out of condition, did not show to advantage, but the stick work all round was fair.

"A" GRADE.

Sydney I. played Manly I. at Moore Park, and won by 8 goals to 3. During the first half of the game the play was even, and some particularly fine stick-work was shown. At half-time the scores were:—Sydney, 4; Manly 3. In the second half lack of condition was responsible for ragged play. For Manly Allison (centre), Walker (goal), and Little (attack) showed the best form, and for the Sydney team Moffatt (defence), Evans (centre), and Hewitt (attack) were most conspicuous. The game was refereed by Mr. W. Drummond.

On the Domain Birchgrove "A" beat Mosman "A" by 12 goals to 4. This was the winners' first game in the "A" grade, and the play was particularly good, but Mosman was not fully represented, several prominent men standing down to give the colts their chance. The Rev. Mr. Todd, after a year's absence, made a welcome reappearance, and again fended goal for Mosman, giving a sound display. Birchgrove played a "nippy" game, but missed some of the best points of the game. For the winners Langker, Allen, and Young (an ex-University player) made the best showing, and Ferguson and Sutherland were conspicuous for Mosman. Mr. Webb refereed.

"B" GRADE.

The Petersham Delawares played the newly-formed Bexley team at Moore Park, and won by 6 goals to 5. The latter team is composed for the greater part of novices, but they did remarkably well. The stick-work of the Delawares was good.

At Kogarah Park St. George beat Petersham III. by 5 goals to 4. The game was very interesting, being fast throughout, and the stickwork was remarkably good.

The match between Birchgrove "B" and Manly "B," played at Domain No. 2, resulted in a win for the former by 5 goals to 4. The game was fairly even.

Hurstville and Manly also played a practice game at Moore Park.

ROWING.

SYDNEY ROWING CLUB.

The Sydney Rowing Club's pair-oar race was concluded on Saturday over the Woolloomooloo Bay course. Results:—

Titchen, 8s, 2. Won by six feet. T. Mulholland and N. Lever, 9s, had the bye. Final: T. Mulholland and N. Lever, 1; C. J. Wellesley and F. T. D. Meares, 2. Won by four lengths.

INTERSTATE EIGHTS.

MURRAY BRIDGE DEFEATS PORT ADELAIDE.

WILL REPRESENT SOUTH AUSTRALIA.

ADELAIDE, Sunday.

When the crew was chosen to represent South Australia in the interstate eights the Rowing Association received a challenge from the Murray Bridge Rowing Club for a contest on the understanding that if they won they should represent the State in the big event. This request was granted by the association, whereupon the interstate crew resigned. The Port Adelaide Club then agreed to give the Murray Bridge men a trial, which took place on the Port River on Saturday, in the presence of a great crowd. Murray Bridge, although their opponents had trained assiduously, simply paddled home, and won by 300 yards. They will therefore represent South Australia in the interstate race, and are considered to have a good chance. The course of three miles was covered in 17m 55s, although the winners were never pressed. The winning crew was as follows:—G. H. S. Oliver (bow), 10st 8lb; W. H. Pfeiffer (2), 10st 6lb; R. D. ## BOXING.

SMITH BEATS JEROME.

Saturday night's contest at the Stadium between Dave Smith and Jerry Jerome proved a triumph for scientific boxing against crude methods of attack, backed up by natural speed and phenomenal endurance. Jerome, an aborigine, possessed all the toughness of his race, and throughout carried a dangerous punch, but though Smith did not pass unscathed, he never really looked like a loser, and won in the eighteenth round. The match was for the light-heavyweight championship (held by Smith), and attracted a very large audience to the Stadium.

A minute after Smith's victory was announced the loser walked to the centre of the ring and smilingly acknowledged the applause his plucky showing elicited.

N.S.W. AMATEUR CHAMPIONSHIPS.

The third stage in the amateur boxing and wrestling championships of New South Wales will be completed at the Stadium to-night, when 17 bouts are down for decision. The draw is as follows:—Bantamweights, C. W. Bell v T. H. Mills, W. Sweetman v F. Wastie, and J. King v P. Coleman; featherweights, R. A. Pierce v F. Jones, P. R. Tobin v [illegible] Brownlee, L. O'Neill v E. Kendrick, P. Jones v L. C. Arnaud; lightweights, H. Head v E. F. [illegible], M. Lacey v J. Hurley, C. Wright v J. Clancy, [illegible] M'Farland v F. S. Summers; welterweights, [illegible] Davis v B. Phelps, H. Webber v F. Valente, [illegible] Smith v P. Macquarie, F. Mason v J. Smith; heavyweights, R. J. A. Mansie v B. J. Cole, and F. [illegible] v C. Jackson.

BURNS v O'BRIEN.

WEST MAITLAND, Sunday.

Jack Burns and Tommy O'Brien met in a boxing match at Andrews' Stadium last night. After 20 rounds the referee gave the decision to Burns on points.

O'DEA v BUTLER.

BROKEN HILL, Sunday.

At the Crystal Theatre on Friday night Sailor O'Dea, 10st 7½lb, defeated Jack Butler, 10st 2lb, after an exciting contest. The police stopped the fight in the eleventh round.

McVEA v BELL.

ADELAIDE, Sunday.

At the Stadium on Saturday night Sam. McVea defeated Colin Bell, of Sydney. The police stopped the fight in the 16th round, and the referee awarded it to the black man. At no stage did Bell appear to have a chance, and it was on sufferance that he stayed so long as he did. He had been felled three times in the 16th round before the police interfered.

GLEESON v THOMAS.

BRISBANE, Sunday.

The contest between Gleeson and Thomas at the Stadium on Saturday night was very mediocre. It lasted till the thirteenth round, when Gleeson had his opponent practically helpless. The police then intervened, and the referee, F. Craig, declared Gleeson the winner.

KEARNS v GEYER.

BUFFALO, April 19.

"Soldier" Kearns knocked out Jack Geyer, of Denver, in the eighth round last night.

MURPHY v WOLGAST.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 20.

Tommy Murphy fought Al. Wolgast 20 rounds last night. The contest was characterised by fast and even work for 16 rounds, and there was little to choose between the fighters; but then Murphy got in a terrific blow on Wolgast's jaw, drawing blood. Wolgast stalled, but he lasted out the 20 rounds. Murphy assailed him with blows from every direction in the final round, and Wolgast had great difficulty in avoiding a knock-out.

ANGLING.

REMARKABLE VARIETY AT CRONULLA.

Mr. David G. Stead, of the Fisheries Investigation Department, has recently returned from a holiday, which he spent with his family at Cronulla, putting in a deal of his time fishing from the rocks, and combining investigation work with sport. He paid frequent visits to Boat Harbour, and discovered several spots where the sport was remarkably good. On one occasion he hooked a large fish, which managed to break his line. Visiting the same place a few days later, he again hooked a heavy fish in the identical spot, and, fortunately, played it for some time, when it broke away. On pulling in the slack line, great was Mr. Stead's surprise to find hanging from the hook his own hook and sinker with line attached which the same fish had broken away with on the previous visit. This is another proof of the fact that not only trout and perch, but also salt-water fish have their regular haunt or beat, which they undoubtedly occupy until caught, chased by larger fish, or for some reason decide to vacate it. During his stay at Cronulla, Mr. Stead caught the following edible fishes, using congeroi for bait:—Black bream, rock blackfish, black rock cod, morwong, wirrah, scaly fin, estuary catfish, and the following varieties of parrot fish: Crimson banded, white spotted, king, orange spotted; also leatherjackets and green eels. Mr. Stead states that, although not generally known, the estuary catfish is quite common on our coast among the weedy patches, where its colouration is very beautiful, and harmonises with the weeds, etc., in which it lives. He considers the catfish a splendid article of food, and had some cooked along with black rock cod, wirrah, and kelp fish on an occasion when visitors were present at his table. All the fish were fried, the catfish having first been skinned, and the verdict after tasting them all was unanimously in favour of the estuary catfish. Anglers should make a mental note of this, and not despise the dangerously armed catfish, which many cut loose rather than lift into the boat. They are making a mistake in throwing away a real delicacy.

The largest fish Mr. Stead caught was a 5lb rock blackfish, and the largest black bream 2¼lb net weight. The encouraging reports as to the numbers of fish to be had in Port Hacking at the present time, coupled with Mr. Stead's experience at Cronulla and Boat Harbour, indicate this locality as well worth a visit.

MR. TREFLE AT GILGANDRA.

"LIBERALS AND STRIKES."

GILGANDRA, Saturday.

The Minister for Lands and Agriculture, Mr. Trefle, delivered a speech here last night.

At the outset he said he wished to deal with some matters of a personal nature. From time to time the statement was published that he had said that "sheep were a curse." He had never at any time made such a foolish statement. No one knew better than he that large areas were not suitable for agriculture. As a matter of fact, that week he had arranged for cutting up large areas of country into blocks averaging over 8000 acres each. There were large areas of territory in New South Wales which must be classed as purely grazing country, and nothing would be more foolish than to attempt to put a man on an agricultural area in districts where the land was unsuitable. He did say at a gathering of the Millions Club in Sydney, when the speakers dwelt on the empty condition of Australia—which in itself was an invitation to the crowded nations in other parts of the world to invade the country—that if they were to convert agricultural areas into sheep runs, thus rendering closer settlement impossible, then sheep might become a curse instead of the blessing they had been in the past. He had dwelt on these matters merely to show the contemptible methods adopted by his opponents to distort and twist his remarks.

Referring to Industrial troubles in his speech to-night, Mr. Trefle said they had had some difficulty with strikes lately, but such difficulties had arisen all over the world. Had the Conservatives been in power lately they would have had a general strike throughout the whole State, which would have paralysed the whole community. No serious injury or inconvenience had happened to anybody as a result of the recent strikes, which had all been speedily ended.

"There are people calling out for a 'strong man,'" said Mr. Trefle. "Heaven help us from 'strong men' in this country, if we are to have more examples such as I have quoted. It strikes me forcibly that if we had any more 'strong men' a state of affairs would be created that would make the Balkan States appear a land of peace and quiet, by comparison. Pandemonium would be established here by the Conservative strong men. If they took 18 weeks and much gaoling to settle one strike, it is rather a difficult problem to say how long and how much gaol would be required to settle half a dozen strikes occurring about the same time."

LABOUR SELECTIONS.

MR. HALL IN THE FIELD.

The executive committee of the Political Labour League has made the following selections of candidates for the next State elections:—

Canterbury.—Mr. F. J. Peters, M.L.A., the present member for Deniliquin, which constituency has been cut out in the redistribution of electorates.

Enmore.—Mr. D. R. Hall, Minister for Justice. This selection of Mr. Hall will involve his retirement from the Legislative Council. Enmore is a new constituency under the redistribution scheme. It takes in parts of several former electorates, but does not eliminate Newtown, which seat is at present held by Mr. Hollis.

Willoughby.—Mr. E. R. Larkin, secretary of the Rugby Football League.

Nominations were received from candidates for selection for the electorates of Alexandria, Balmain, and Hurstville. The P.L.L. executive has sent these on to the respective leagues for selection, there being more than one in each case.

LATE MR. W. BROOME.

The late Mr. William Broome, who died at his residence, Kent, Doncaster-avenue, Kensington, on Friday last, at the age of 57 years, was an officer of the New South Wales Education Department. The funeral took place on Saturday afternoon, and was largely attended. Deceased was born at Nailsea, Somersetshire, England, in 1856. He spent his boyhood and youth in the Newcastle district. Entering the service of the then Council of Education in 1869, he went through the Training College course, and was appointed to the Tighe's Hill Public School. Subsequently he was appointed to higher positions at East Maitland, Camperdown, Surry Hills, and finally to Stanmore, from the headmastership of which he was compelled to retire, on account of ill-health, about two years ago. Deceased leaves a widow, three sons, and four daughters.

Prior to the departure of the cortege, a short service was conducted at the house by the Rev. A. S. Hutchings, who also officiated at the graveside. The chief mourners were Messrs. ## THE DENTIST'S TUG.

"I have always dreaded the proverbial 'tug' when having teeth extracted," a man said to me the other day.

I extracted a tooth for that man and he admitted afterwards that he did not know the tooth was out. He was delighted, and so is everyone else.

My system has banished pain absolutely from extractions. I have taken teeth out for a lady of 80 and for children of 3, without the slightest ill effect. My system does not affect the heart. I do not prick the gums, but leave them in a perfectly healthy and natural condition.

A full set of artificial teeth, upper or lower, costs only £2 2s, and you get my written guarantee that gives you absolute protection for five years.

The same applies to Fillings. I repair any fault caused by fair wear free of charge.

Consultations Free.

Open till 6 p.m. Daily (Saturdays included) and until 9 p.m. Fridays.

LADIES! YOU CAN

SAVE TWO GUINEAS ON YOUR TAILORED COSTUME.

Because of my extremely small expenses, I am able to MAKE YOU A £7/7/ COSTUME FOR £5/5/.

This difference of two guineas results from the fact that here you save your proportion of the large drapers' "overhead charges," such as heavy rents, shopwalkers, managers, and directors' salaries, shareholders' dividends, London office expenses, and all those luxurious items that have to be paid out of the sales made and profits charged.

FROM FIVE GUINEAS

A DELIGHTFUL COSTUME—

One that I will cut myself, and personally supervise the tailoring of.

The style will be the latest.

The materials most exclusive.

And the linings and trimmings of the best quality.

Your friends will admire the costume I make for you, and envy you the small cost of it.

In every way—in making, style, fit, and price—you will have every satisfaction in placing your Winter Costume order with me.

CALL IN TO-DAY AND EXAMINE MY COSTUMINGS.

They are my own private selections and importations. Most of them are in Exclusive Costume Lengths, and all of them are different from and better than anything you will see elsewhere.
